Child Safety Seats May be Mandatory

By JANE BOLGER
Post Correspondent

Petitions supporting Child Safety Seat legislation are being circulated locally "to immunize children against the consequences of automobile crashes...which kill and cripple more children than any major disease."

Joann Sarley of Dallas, whose son Scott is the Easter Seal Child this year, is an avid supporter of the new legislation being coordinated locally by the Wyoming Valley Crippled Childrens Association.

Over 240 signatures have been obtained to date and will be forwarded to the Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics to support Senate Bill 21. The bill, which the Senate has passed and is now about to go before the House, would make the use of federally approved car safety seats for children mandatory under penalty of a $50 fine.

Thirty-nine other states already have similar laws in effect according to Bonnie Marge, Social Service Worker for the Wyoming Valley Crippled Childrens Assoc.

"Children are like little projectiles in a car," Marge stated, providing statistics that last year in Pennsylvania 9,000 children under age five were involved in crashes, 2,700 were injured, 400 incapacitated and 36 died.

"Children are least safe if you are holding them in your lap," she stated. "You can crush them or create very severe injuries."

Community-sponsored programs are being planned to alert new mothers of the dangers facing their children when they are traveling in cars and brochures are being distributed as part of a National Safety Council Campaign.

Presently bumper stickers with messages such as "Bring Your Child Home Alive, Buckle Him Up" are available for anyone who may want them at the W.V.C.C.A. office in the Kirby Health Center. The local Triple A Club has child safety seats available to lend to people for a nominal deposit.

Community involvement has also helped. In addition to signing petitions, people or organizations will hold fund raisers to purchase more safety seats which would be available to low income families. On the personal level, anyone having a car seat that is no longer in use is urged to pass it on to be used by a young child and to set a good example for all children by wearing automobile safety devices themselves.
