Deca awards

Deca Donor pins awarded

Fifty people were awarded Deca Donor pins at the Back Mountain blood collection at Shavertown United Methodist Church on Tuesday, Sept. 13. An additional 124 signed up for membership, many of whom will qualify in the near future.

The Deca Donor Club was officially launched on June 25 at Williamsport Hospital and is open to all blood donors of N.E. Pennsylvania who pledge to donate blood five times a year.

The club originated from a thought by Paul Hodges, of Dallas, American Red Cross Director of Donor Resources, shortly after he joined the Red Cross. Donors were invited to make an appointment for their next donation; this was called forward booking and was immediately successful with 90 percent signing up, of which seven in 10 returned for the following collection.

The Red Cross felt such faithful donors deserved recognition and the Deca Donor Club was born. The word "Deca" stems from the Greek for 10, implying every 10 weeks and the membership pin embodies five arrows signifying five donations in a year. The pin is the creation of Nancy Carmon, Public Relations Coordinator at the Blood Center in Wilkes-Barre. A pin is awarded at the completion of each fifth donation.

Deca Donor Clubs have now been formed around donor groups at Williamsport Hospital, Mercy Hospital, Wilkes-Barre, Wilkes-Barre City Center Blood Council, Scranton Center City Blood Council, as well as the Back Mountain Blood Council. Plans are underway for clubs at the Abington, Pittston and Nanticoke Blood Councils as well as groups in Milton, Williamsport and similar communities. Current membership is in excess of 600.
