

WEEK IN REVIEW

Coach named

Robert Mitkus was reappointed as assistant junior high school track coach for the Dallas School District by the board of education at its meeting Feb. 13. Mitkus will be paid a salary of $756 for the track season.

The board also accepted the resignation of Kim Reese, junior high school assistant softball coach, and voted to allow principal Gerald Wycallis to attend a development conference in New York City. Wycallis' presence at the conference will cost the district approximately $395.

Strike ends

Twenty-two unionized workers at the Banks Equipment Co. accepted a three-year pact Wednesday, thus putting an end to a 13-day old strike at the Jackson Township business. The new pact calls for wage increases of 30 cents, 30 cents and 25 cents per hour with modifications to the company's medical plan. It also offers a five-cent increase in longevity pay for employees who have worked 15 years or more.

The workers who are mostly mechanics and welders, maintain construction equipment. It was the first strike in at least 10 years at the plant.

Attorney needed

Due to the untimely death of Attorney Merton Jones, the Dallas Area Fall Fair Association is seeking an attorney to handle its legal affairs. Attorney Jones had served the Fair Association faithfully for many years on a volunteer basis.

Because of impending legal matters of the Fall Fair Association an attorney is needed as soon as possible. Anyone interested should reply to the Dallas Area Fall Fair Association, Box 393, Dallas, Pa. 18612.

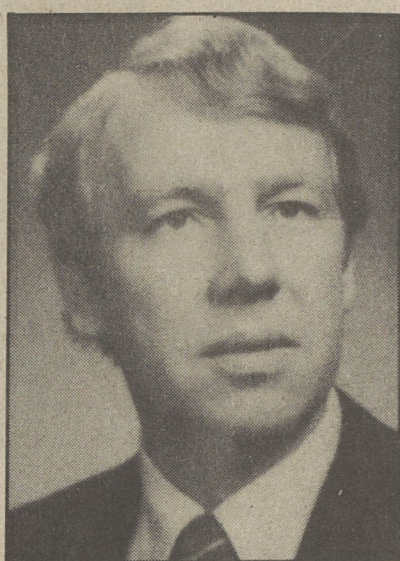

Dr. Camp named visiting professor

Dr. William D. Camp, chairperson of the social science and history department at Luzerne County Community College, has been appointed a visiting professor for the international study program and will lecture throughout Western Europe.

The European trip will require Dr. Camp to speak in cities located in Belgium, France, Switzerland, Germany and the Netherlands. The international study program is sponsored by various American colleges and allows students to gain knowledge and college credits in European history from actually visiting the sites.

Professor Camp, a resident of Dallas, is a graduate of Gordon College in Wenham, Mass. He received his masters degree from Fairleigh Dickinson University and a Doctorate at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

Camp is active in local and national organizations.

DR. WILLIAM D. CAMP

Dr. Camp and his wife Ann have two children, a son William Jr. and a daughter Adrienne.

Guide aids unemployed

A free guide of "Local Resources For The Unemployed" is now available to Dallas residents faced with the problems of temporary or chronic unemployment.

The easy-to-read directory was developed as a public service by United Way of Wyoming Valley in response to the concerns of people who are uncertain of where to turn when unemployment affects their lives. It was designed to increase their awareness of local supportive programs which can help to deal with current problems and prevent possible crisis situations within the household.

The brochure addresses normal feelings and questioned experienced by an unemployed individual and lists public and private human service agencies that provide assistance with emergency food, financial, energy, counseling, medical and social services. This listing is not a recommendation for any particular agency or service, but simply a statement of what services are available, where they are located and how they may be contacted.

Also included are special precautions for job hunters and tips dealing with prolonged periods of unemployment.

Funded by the Rural Health Corporation of Northeastern Pennsylvania, the booklet is part of United Way's Economic Disruption Program (EDP).

"There's no easy answer to living with unemployment, except of course, having a job," says Walter Klepaski, Jr., United Way Director of Labor Relations and Community Services. "But, during such difficult times, there are many resources in our community available to those in need."

To obtain the booklet of local resources free of charge, contact Walter at the United Way Labor Participation Department, 9 East Market St., Wilkes-Barre, or phone 829-8725.

Statue replica

Mrs. Sitar is shown here with a replica of the Statue of Liberty which she made. The replica, which took two weeks to make, stood as a symbol of the statue during the recent Save Our Statue Marathon held at Gate of Heaven School, Dallas.
