Mental Retardation Month

Forward strides appreciated

March is Mental Retardation month. During this time, those who love or serve mentally retarded persons hope to draw attention to the national, state and local problem of mental retardation and its effect on the family, the community, and the economy. This recognition is made in appreciation of the forward strides being made in improving the chances of the mentally retarded to lead happy, useful and satisfying lives in the community and in anticipation of future gains to be accomplished through a knowledgeable and supportive public.

The Luzerne-Wyoming County MH-MR Center offers comprehensive Treatment, Case Management and Day Development services for adults with mental retardation. These services are located at 320 South Franklin Street in Wilkes-Barre.

Referrals and intakes for all adult mental retardation services are initiated by MR Case Management staff. These referrals usually fall into two broad categories: Institutional and Community.

Staff meet with the person nearing discharge from a state facility at the earliest possible time to establish a rapport that will continue when they return to their home or structured living arrangement. Evaluations are performed to formulate a Life Management Plan for each individual. This Plan activates a network of liaison, advocacy, referral and service involving Center components or allied organizations and groups. Referrals from the community usually originate from intermediate units or school districts that provide special education classes. When the adult with mental retardation graduates from these special education classes, Case Managers line with the person and their family to provide continuity of care and service.

Whether referrals originate from institutional or community settings, MR Case Managers act as the initial and ongoing liaison between the adult with mental retardation and their families and the community as a whole. Staff members also provide direct counseling services if necessary, and monitor treatment throughout the MH-MR Center's other clinical components.

Case Management is responsible for implementation and maintenance of services that enhance the clients' physical, emotional, economic, vocational, residential and social well-being. Adults with mental retardation can utilize a multitude of the Center's director or supportive services to assist them to function as meaningful and productive members of society.

One unique educational service is the MR Day Development Program. The Program is a state-licensed adult day-care facility that provides instruction in and enhancement of the individual's Activities of Daily Living Skills, and pre-vocational and basic community survival skills.

For further information on mental retardation services, contact the Center at 823-2155, 24 hours a day.

Poison Prevention Week

Some tips for avoiding disasters

Children act fast - so do poisons! It is again the theme for Poison Prevention Week, March 18-24. The phrase clearly and simply describes the unpredictability of children and the predictability of poisonous substances.

Jack B. Ogun, R.Ph. director of the state Health Department's Division of Drugs, Devices and Cosmetics, is also the Department's poison control coordinator. He says children under five are among the most frequent victims of accidental poisoning.

"Children at that age are in stages of growth and development where they are constantly exploring the world around them. It is part of the learning process and they shouldn't be discouraged.

"Unfortunately, what they see and reach for, they often put in their mouths. This is the hazard that parents must guard against."

Ogun gives these tips for keeping medicines and hazardous products safely out of reach. When using household products such as furniture polish, oven cleaners and other cleaning aids, never let them out of your sight - even if you have to take them with you to answer the phone or the door bell.

— Store medicines away from household products, and keep them in the original containers with the original labeling.

— Never refer to medicines as candy.

— Clean out your medicine cabinet from time to time and carefully discard old medications.

— Use safety packaging properly by closing the container and securely after use.

Ogun noted that safety packaging for drugs and chemicals is well worth the trouble.

"In 1973, ingestion of oral prescription drugs by children under five accounted for 4,180 hospital visits nationwide. In 1981, the latest year for which figures are available, the number had dropped to 2,688.

"Even more impressive, in 1972 there were 216 accidental poisoning deaths of children in the same age group. By 1980, the number had dropped to 12. The Consumer Product Safety Commission is currently considering child resistant packaging for additional products not currently covered, which are hazardous to children."

O'Connell protects buyers from 'lemons'

Sen. Frank J. O'Connell, R-20, has announced his support of a bill that protects a new car buyer who gets stuck with a "lemon."

O'Connell explained that the measure will entitle a new car buyer to a refund or replacement if a major defect covered by the warranty cannot be repaired in three attempts within a year of the purchase date or 12,000 miles, whichever comes first. Refund or replacement would also apply if the vehicle is out of service for 30 days because of a defect.

The "lemon aid" bill was unanimously approved by the Senate and it will be sent to the House for concurrence.

Surveys available

Free energy surveys for businesses are now available through the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania's Region III, Pennsylvania Energy Center.

An energy survey is an analysis of a building's heating and cooling efficiency, conducted by Energy Efficiency Teams from the Energy Center. The survey takes approximately one hour and includes checks of heating and cooling equipment, windows, doors, insulation, lighting, appliances, water heating and usage patterns that affect consumption.

Free books and pamphlets concerning energy conservation are available from the Region III Energy Center. These publications include the following topics: (insulation, solar energy, wind energy, heating with wood, home energy cost cutting, etc.).

To receive any publication write the Region III Pennsylvania Energy Center, P.O. Box 777, Avoca, Pa. 18641.
