Being interviewed

More than 50 engineering technology students at Penn State Wilkes-Barre who will receive their associate degrees in May are presently being interviewed by recruiters from 17 large companies through the spring 1984 on-campus recruiting program at the Lehman campus. Among the company recruiters are two from IBM Endicott who are both associate degree graduates of Penn State Wilkes-Barre. Michael Baratta was in the second graduating class in the electrical engineering technology program in 1956. He is IBM superintendent of processor and bank manufacturing. Richard J. Wroblewski, a 1963 graduate, is the functional manager of impact printer development at IBM Endicott. Shown here, from left, seated, are Jim Sepko, electrical engineering technology major; Marianne Poepferling, mechanical engineering technology; and Gary McDermitt, electrical engineering technology. Standing, Wroblewski, Todd Davies and Joe Usefara, mechanical engineering technology and Baratta.

Workshop conducted

Penn State/Wilkes-Barre conducted a professional development writing skills workshop for personnel at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, Wilkes-Barre. The eight-hour workshop, held in two sessions, was developed by Patricia Hinchey, English instructor at Penn State Wilkes-Barre, to improve professional and personal writing of the participants by developing a better understanding of the writing process and an awareness of common writing problems. Shown here are V.A. personnel. From left, Arlene Dabbieri, Ralph Shemanski and George Gromniak. Standing, Sharon Ward, coordinator of workshops and special programs; and Patricia Hinchey, instructor, both of Penn State Wilkes-Barre.

'Self-Power Program' held

The Dallas Junior High School Cafeteria, ARA Services, started a "Self-Power Program" on March 6.

The "Self-Power Program" is a nutritional educational program directed to the 7th graders with the theme "Be Everything You Want to Be," showing the strong connection between proper diet and:

- prime performance in sports and exercise

- feeling well and looking good
- achievement in academics
- social success and self-confidence
- intelligent choice in the use of alcohol, cigarettes and drugs.

Presentations will be given every Tuesday and Thursday during the Month of March.

Apply now for PHEAA grants

Now is the time for potential and currently enrolled adult students to apply for financial aid, according to the Educational Opportunity Center in Wilkes-Barre.

Individuals applying for initial Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) grants for four-year, baccalaureate programs or renewal PHEAA grants for trade, business, two and four year programs have until May 1, 1984 to apply. First time PHEAA applications for trade, business and two-year programs for the 1984-85 school year are not due until Aug. 1, 1984.

Further information and assistance in applying for financial aid may be obtained by calling the local EOC office at 825-8435 for an appointment.

The Educational Opportunity Center is funded by the U.S. Department of Education and is a career guidance and educational resource center for adults who want to return to technical school.
