Art Show held at Imagery

The Third Annual Suzanne Maria Rossetti Memorial Art Show was held recently at Sue Hand's Imagery in Dallas.

The juried art shown is an example of the level of competence in art students in the Back Mountain area and surrounding communities. One hundred and 56 entries were displayed out of nearly 300 entries in this year's competition for grades 7-12.

Judges for this year's show were Ann Spencer, assistant art director of a Philadelphia firm, and Amy Garinger, a senior art education major at College Misericordia. Several other persons were unable to help with the judging due to Thursday's snow storm.

Each participant is allowed to enter a maximum of five entries and very few students are able to see all five of their entries on display. This year, however, there were several excellent exhibitors who achieved that status of "five out of five." They were Leah Mikush, Nancy Norkaitis and Chris Boyes, Kingston; Kim Thomas, Plymouth; Mark Stash, Lehman; and Patrizia Bove and Kurt Fetterman, Dallas.

Entrants from Tunkhannock High

School won many acrylic awards, sweeping every acrylic award in 11th grade. Their teachers are Joan Machuga and Jim Rogowski. Dallas senior high students under Jane Cornell, won heavily in mixed media and scratchboard areas.

The contest is named for Suzanne Rossetti, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rossetti of Saugus, Massachusetts. Suzanne was kidnapped and murdered three years ago near her home in Phoenix, Arizona, by two convicts, one a prison escapee and one out on a work release program.

Joe and Sue Hand, sponsors of the contest, wish to thank all area residents, students and art instructors who entered, participated in and viewed this year's exhibit. Next year's contest is scheduled to be held in late April at College Misericordia's Art Gallery.
