Prettiest group

Today is National UNICEF Day

By presidential proclamation, October 31 is National UNICEF Day. There are millions of reasons to give to UNICEF on that day, and all of them are children. Every dollar that is dropped into an official UNICEF Day Collection Carton on Halloween will be translated into clean water, good food, health, education and social services for millions of the world's poorest children.

This year UNICEF is supporting a Child Survival Revolution that could save the lives of seven million children a year and provide parents in developing countries with the means and knowledge to save their children from unnecessary suffering and death.

With the potential lying so close at hand for saving the lives of millions of children and improving the lives of many millions more, UNICEF needs your help this Halloween more than ever.
