Courses

Misericordia will also offer two credit-gree courses on quilting.

"Applique Pillow Top" will run for four consecutive Thursday evenings, 7 to 9 p.m., beginning Feb. 7. Participants will each complete a quilted pillow cover.

"Quilting for Young People" is open to children, ages 10-16. It will be held on four consecutive Saturday mornings beginning Feb. 16.

According to Ennis, quilting is an old craft which has developed over the years into an art. It can be enjoyed by both the individual and the social group.

"My quilt becomes something I can hand down to my children, something which will last longer than I will," Ennis.

For further information and registration, contact the college's Office of Special Programs at 675-2181, ext. 331.

Dallas releases TELLs results

Dallas School District Acting Superintendent, Gerald Wycallis, has indicated that 97 students in the district will qualify for remedial instruction as a result of the competency tests taken earlier this year by the district's third, fifth, and eighth graders, of these 97 students, 45 students will be participating in both the Math and Reading Remedial Programs. TELLs (Testing for Essential Learning and Literacy Skills) measures a student's achievement in reading and mathematics.

The TELLs program is a major component of Governor Dick Thornburgh's "Turning the Tide: An Agenda for Excellence in Pennsylvania Public Schools," which was announced last year. Statewide, more than 353,000 public school students and 75,000 nonpublic school students took the tests in October.

While all third, fifth and eighth grade students in public schools were required to take the tests, participation by nonpublic schools was voluntary.

The tests showed that among 152 third grade students who took the reading tests, 82 percent exceeded the cutoff score of 29 correct answers out of 52 questions. For third grade mathematics, 88 percent exceeded the cutoff score of 39 out of 63 questions.

Among 187 fifth grade students taking the reading test, 92 percent exceeded the cutoff score of 37 out of 65 questions. For the fifth grade mathematics test, 79 percent of the fifth graders exceeded the cutoff score of 40 correct answers out of 66 questions.

Among 263 eighth grade students taking the reading test, 83 percent exceeded the cutoff score of 46 out of 76 questions. On the mathematics test, 86 percent of the eighth graders exceeded the cutoff score of 40 correct answers out of 78 questions.

Wycallis stated that although students enrolled in some special education classes took the tests, their scores were not included in the results he released. Those students, he said, receive appropriate services through their individual education programs (IEP's). TELLs test data for exceptional students provide additional information for developing IEP's.

"The next step," Wycallis said, "is to design remedial instruction programs for the regular students who were identified by the TELLs tests." He noted, however, in passing this year's state budget, the General Assembly appropriated funds for remedial instruction following the TELLs tests. The legislature distributed $17 million of those funds among the state's 501 school districts with the Dallas School District being allotted $15,871. Those funds are designated for remediation related activities and other efforts to improve instruction. Another $7 million will be distributed on the basis of the test results.

The school district's plan for remedial instruction is being prepared and remedial instruction is scheduled to begin during the second semester. Within the next week, schools will send individual student's scores home with each child. Parents should be watching for reports and should contact the principal of their child's school if they have any questions about the scores.
