Hospitality, seafood abound at Dry Dock

By PAMELA AARON
Staff Correspondent

In the midst of a rolling countryside, surrounded by Scottish firs and rhododendron, sits a rustic chateau: its multi-national flags waving salutations to all who come to rest within its domain.

For the traveler, or simply the well-traveled, The Dry Dock Restaurant on Overbrook Road in Dallas, will prove to be a delightful discovery offering the finest in fresh seafood, as well as boundless hospitality, in an atmosphere reminiscent of an old New England tawler.

The Dry Dock is owned and operated by Alan Pugh of A.M. Pugh Communications in Dallas and managed by his mother, Jean, who has operated two successful restaurants in the New York area. Jean's dedication to hospitality and service is matched only by her sense of graciousness; evident in the quietly luxurious decor of the Dry Dock.

The dominant colors are in tranquil New England blues; replete with oak walls and a cozy fireplace. The table service is white with a contrasting brass colored border, which complements the fresh white carnation/baby's breath bouquets on each table and the brass
