Graduation exercises conducted

College Misericordia graduated 264 men and women at its commencement exercises on Saturday on the college's South lawn. A baccalaureate mass took place at 10 a.m.

Honorary Doctor of Law degrees were conferred upon Reverend William J. Byron, S.J., president of Catholic University and former president of the University of Scranton and Sondra Myers of Scranton. Father Byron delivered the commencement address.

In his address to the graduates, Reverend Byron noted that the most pressing issue of this collegiate generation was "materialism."

"It seems to me that the common denominator in any inventory of urgent, pressing, important and significant problems is materialism," said Byron. "To have is more important than to be. To possess better than to share. Property takes on more importance than people. We are for the most part unbalanced in favor of materialism."

His suggested solution to the graduates was to write a letter to yourself to be read once a year, perhaps on your birthday. In that letter, make an estimate of the extent to which materialism has a grip on your life. This measures the distance between you and the beginning of your personal contribution to a solution to the most pressing issues you see for your time.

Dr. James J. Pallante, academic dean of the college, presented the 264 degree candidates; Misericordia president, Dr. Joseph R. Fink, conferred the degrees.

The new graduates heard remarks by the class valedictorian, Lorraine A. Ulatowski. Ms. Ulatowski noted that the class motto, "Dream...Challenge...Experience," was fulfilled as "we were constantly being urged to set goals, to study a little harder, and to fill each day with new and rewarding experience."

Sister Mary Ann Dillon, RSM, provincial administrator of the Sisters of Mercy Provincialate at Dallas, offered the benediction.

The college's 59th commencement convocation marks the graduation of the first occupational therapy class and the first computer science graduate.

glarizing your home! Our generation is handing everything to our kids, except pieces of themselves."

Elmer Bradshaw, head of the Luzerne County Crime Watch Association, explained that a crime watch is a people's program.

"It's basically neighbors helping neighbors, and it can spread to other areas besides crime prevention," Bradshaw added. "In several of our areas, neighbors have become much closer, have helped take care of the sick or elderly, etc. It can and does work in rural areas where a large percentage of property crimes occur."

Bradshaw concluded, "A crime watch does need the blessings of your political leaders and police departments to be most effective."

And it would seem the Back Mountain Community has the blessings of its police forces. Many local police officers were in attendance, along with Police Chief Ed Lyons of Dallas Borough, Police Chief Paul Sabol of Kingston Township and Police Chief Carl Miers of Dallas Township. Paul Labar, Mayor of Dallas was also in attendance, representing the Borough Council.
