

Center visited

Six members of a Dallas Brownie Troop headed by Lauren Chimock recently toured the Geisinger Family Health Center in the Dallas Shopping Center. The youngsters explored an examination room, the Laboratory, and discussed x-rays, first aid and poison safety with Dr. Eugene Gorski, family physician at the Geisinger site in Dallas. The group is shown in the x-ray room at the Geisinger Family Health Center in Dallas, from left, Debbie Gregor, Michelle Boyle, Katie Moylan, Amy Beardsworth, Gina Stortz, Carra Giordina and Dr. Gorski. Mrs. Chimock stands behind the children.

Tea held

Wilkes-Barre General Hospital's Auxiliary held a Past-President's Tea on Monday, June 3 at 2 p.m. at the Westmoreland Club. This was the first tea ever held to honor all Auxiliary past-presidents. Mrs. Sid Alinkoff was chairman of the tea, Mrs. Richard Ayre, co-chairman, and Mrs. Stephen Wartella, hostess. Entertainment for the afternoon was provided by Cynthia Millington, accompanied by her sister, Michele Millington Drago. They performed excerpts from "High Fidelity," a musical comedy written by Lillian Alinkoff. Champagne also was served. Pictured above are four Auxiliary Past Presidents. From left, Mrs. Richard Ayre (Mountaintop); Mrs. John B. Schmitt (Wilkes-Barre); Mrs. Frank Henry (Dallas) and Mrs. John B. Cornell (Shavertown).

He's bullish on America

By E. FEULNER
Special to The Post

Bob Bleiberg, editor and publisher of Barron's financial weekly, is bullish on America.

And though not everyone stops to listen when he speaks - as they allegedly do "when E.F. Hutton speaks" - the smart money in town should be on Bleiberg.

What has Bleiberg been telling his quarter-million subscribers?

In the spring of 1982, when most economists agreed that the recession was coming to an end (Business Week, for example, headlined its May 10, 1982 cover story, "Here Comes the Recovery"), which is what it did, right through the end of November 1982.

On November 22, Bleiberg again went against convention and in a front-page editorial said the economy was headed "onward and upward." Six months later, on June 27, 1983, when many observers were still voicing doubts about the durability and strength of the recovery, Bleiberg again climbed out on a limb with a follow-up commentary headlined "Let the Good Times Roll - Business Recovery Promises to Better Most of the Forecasts." And again he called it right.

I bring up these brief slices of history not just because Bleiberg has a remarkable track record spanning several decades, but because he is out on a limb again, predicting that everything is in place for a period of sustained economic growth that will likely cause economic historians to someday refer to our times as the "Amazing Eighties."

Speaking recently at a national leadership conference sponsored by the prestigious Shavano Institute, Bleiberg offered a number of reasons for his optimism.

1) Contrary to popular opinion, the economic recovery has not been limited to the United States, but has been worldwide. "Indeed, since January 1, a dozen major stock markets - including Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Frankfurt, London, Oslo, Paris, Singapore, Stockholm, Sydney, Taipei, Tokyo, and Zurich - have hit all-time highs," he noted.

2) Despite "the grim predictions of Henry Kaufman" and other doomsayers, interest rates are heading downward.

3) From the standpoint of population trends, the '80s "shape up as potentially one of the greatest decades since the Baby Boom peaked in the late '50s," he said. In 1982, for example, 2.5-million Americans got married, the greatest number of marriages in U.S. history. On the other side of the coin, the number of divorces dropped three percent in 1982, to roughly 1.2 million - the first decline in twenty years. Naturally enough, he noted, "something resembling a modest baby boom is under way." And in an affluent society, "there's no more powerful an economic and social force than family formation and population growth."

4) Despite all the scare talk, Americans are growing healthier and living longer.
