Students honored

Eleven Dallas Intermediate School students recently were presented certificates for academic achievement at an awards assembly. During the 1984 to 1985 school year the students had maintained an A average. The students receiving this award were: Fourth grade: Eric Spear and Eric Lehman; Fifth grade: Kelly Cleary, Megan Moran, Brian Jayne, Joseph Hudak, and Keith McDonald; Sixth grade: Jane Oh, Molly Pfeiffer, Jeri Searfoss, and Jeff Mokyich. Shown here are, from left, first row, Jane Oh, Molly Pfeiffer, Jeri Searfoss, Kelly Cleary, Megan Moran. Second row, Brian Jayne, Joseph Hudak, Keith McDonald, Jeff Mokyich, Eric Spear and Eric Lehman.

Program conducted

Students from 10 area junior high schools participated recently in a "Technology Career Exploration" day at Penn State Wilkes-Barre. The program, sponsored by the Opportunities in Technology grant project at the Lehman campus, allowed the students to explore their specific areas of interest in several engineering technology fields. Penn State engineering faculty conducted sessions which included demonstrations and hands-on experiences. Some of the participants are shown here. From left, seated, Shawn Rose, Crestwood; Nicole Mack, Wyoming Valley West; Patricia Stone, Wilkes-Barre Township; Michalene Modresky, Plains Township; and Denise Davis, Lake-Lehman. Standing, Patricia O'Neill, Penn State academic advisor; Eric May, Wyoming Seminary; D.J. Hopkins, Dallas; Chris Stefanec, Hanover; and Helen Stager, coordinator of the Opportunities in Technology program. Other schools participating included Bishop Hoban, Rice Township and Fairview.

Committee formed

A major new committee has been formed at Penn State Wilkes-Barre to help the campus plan a Center for Technology. Shown are, from left, seated, Fred Hartwigsen, Penn State Board member and official at U.G.I.; Dr. James Ryan, campus executive officer; John N. Conyngnam, chairman of Penn State's board; Dr. David Rice, director of academic affairs and chairman of the committee; Hanford Eckman, president, Energy Convertors, Inc.; Frank Pope, Commonwealth Telephone Enterprises; and Dr. Tom Winter, physics professor. Standing, Jim Campbell, director of continuing education, Penn State; James White, Pennsylvania Power & Light Nuclear Department; Douglas Trumbower, Smith, Miller and Associates; Russell Johnson, TDX Systems, Inc.; Dr. Richard Aston, engineering professor; Milton Johns, InterMetro Industries; Dr. Craig Clarke, psychology professor; Major Phillip Kimerer, Tobyhanna Army Depot; Arnold Mrozinski, RCA

Corporation; Bob Patrician, GTE Sylvania; Adam Crahall, Offset Paperback; Walter Sowa, engineering professor; William Ward, Pennsylvania Power & Light Nuclear Department; M.J. handrahan, TDX Systems, Inc.; Harold Groff, telecommunications instructor; and Dr. Anatol Kuczura, Commonwealth Telephone Enterprises. Also on the committee, but not shown, are Ian Richardson, Offset Paperback; Tom Whittle, Offset Paperback; John Gorski, MCI; Joseph Clifford, PP&L; Thomas Robinson, Bell of Pennsylvania; Robert Balla and Jack Kolesar, Penn State engineering professors; and Robert Reynolds, Owens-Illinois.
