Around town

IT'S A SURE BET that summer has arrived when Harveys Lake Yacht Club has held its first summer season dinner dance. Those attending enjoyed dancing to the music of the Starfires following dinner. The Happy New Year theme lent a festive air to the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. William Thorpe chaired the dinner-dance.

LAST WEEK I MENTIONED what fun it is to attend flea markets and house sales. At one house sale, my husband picked up a 1912 edition of a book entitled "Healthy Living and Nutrition". It's actually a home medical book which contains a section on good nutrition which includes loads of interesting recipes.

Since the average family was much larger then, recipes call for huge amounts of ingredients, an example, for oyster stew scrub 100 oysters. Anyway, the baked goods requiring yeast, all call for 1 cup of yeast. I know yeast was sold differently then, but can any of our readers tell me how to convert these recipes so that I can use the dry or small blocks of yeast now available in the stores. Please call me at 675-0835.

FOR THE PAST TWO WEEKS, my son Billy has been talking about a baby squirrel that he has seen in the yard. At first I didn't think too much about it but then when I asked him to describe it, he said it had a line like a pencil mark running down its back and that it was brown, I knew he was seeing a chipmunk.

This little chipmunk has gotten pretty familiar with the children, appearing frequently on our front porch, but never when I was around. However, the chipmunk and I finally met on Tuesday when he ran into my living room through the opened front door. Never having been too good with rodent-like animals, I shrieked, scaring the poor chipmunk and chasing him out. The person who got the worst of it though, is my sister Nancy who was talking to me on the phone. Her ears are probably still ringing with "There's a chipmunk in my house!"

THURSDAY IS INDEPENDENCE DAY. Hope all our readers have a great time celebrating it in style with cookouts, parades, swimming, good, old fashioned fun. Don't forget to hang out your flag. This is a day when Old Glory should fly!

DEAR "AUNT PATTY"

DEAR AUNT PATTY:

I went to a restaurant last week with several friends. I ordered a roast pork sandwich. After completing half of the sandwich I noticed the meat had some green looking mold on it. I spoke to the waitress about it so she took it into the kitchen with her. She later returned and told me the cook said there was nothing wrong with the meat. She said the strange color was because they had sliced other foods on the slicer previously and that's why the meat was discolored. She said that because I had eaten more than half of the sandwich, I had to pay for it.

I have been upset ever since that episode. What do you think I should have done?

DEAR R.G.:

You should have told the waitress to wrap up the remainder of the sandwich because you wanted to take it with you to show a few people. Did you ask to speak to the restaurant manager or owner? Sometimes they will handle a problem or complaint much more proficiently than a waitress or waiter.

DEAR AUNT PATTY:

I have been divorced from my husband for more than 16 years. My ex has since remarried and lives a great distance from me. I live in the same town as my married daughters and grandchildren.

I do not depend on my family for anything and I live a very active and fulfilling life. I provide for myself financially and in every other way. I do all my own shopping, cooking, and housekeeping, and I don't rely on anyone for anything. I have a lot of dear friends, so I don't feel lonely like some of the people I know who are my age (61) and live alone.

I love my children and grandchildren, and I see them often. But there is one problem that bothers me. I have been dating a respectable man regularly for the past 14 months. He is younger than me (57) and divorced too. My daughters and sons-in-law act as if there is something humorous in our relationship, and my grandchildren seem to be picking up the same attitude. When my daughters talk about "Mom and her boyfriend," it sounds as if they're talking about an adolescent with a crush.

Why do my children patronize me when I am a sensible, independent, and capable person? I don't want this to cause friction in the family, but I do want to put a stop to this. What can I say?

NOT READY FOR THE ROCKING CHAIR

DEAR NOT READY:

Coping with the reality of a parent's sexuality is often difficult for adult children. It is an attitude perpetuated by society at large, which views sexuality among older people as either "dirty" or "cute".

Your family seems to have chosen "cute". I think you should have a frank open talk with them. Say exactly what you have said in this letter. Point out that you find their patronizing attitude inappropriate and hurtful, and you wish they would treat you as the independent adult you are.

DEAR AUNT PATTY:

I am looking for a neat and unique gift to get my boyfriend for his 20th birthday. He mentioned he would like a pair of inversion boots. I have searched and searched through dozens of shoe stores and cannot find any. If you could describe what they are maybe I will have better luck finding them. I don't want to ask my boyfriend because I don't want to give him any hints. Thanks.

DEAR BOOTS:

Inversion boots are worn by athletes while hanging upside down. They are supposed to help counteract the compressive effects of running, sitting, and standing. The boots are used as a training aid to promote flexibility and mobility. Opinions differ concerning the benefits and or harmful effects of the boots. I would suggest you look in a sporting goods store or buy some runners magazines for advertisements for inversion boots.
