Your Social Security

People who receive supplemental security income (SSI) are responsible for reporting any event that could affect their right to payments or the payment amount, Thomas Lavelle Social Security manager in Wilkes-Barre, said recently.

SSI payments are made to people 65 or older or blind or disabled who have little income and who do not own much in the way of property.

It is important that any change in a person's situation be reported promptly, Lavelle said. This way the payment rate can be adjusted quickly so the person is not inconvenienced.

People getting SSI can make their report in person, by mail, or by telephone. But no matter how they report, they should include the person's Social Security number under which payment is made, the change being reported, the date it happened, and if the report is in writing, the person's signature and address.

Everyone getting SSI payments should report the following:

- Any move or change of address, even if checks are deposited directly into an account at a bank or other financial organization.
- If there is any change in the household; whether anyone moves into or out of the home; whether there are any changes in the amounts of money people contribute to expenses.
- If a person enters or leaves an institution.
- If a person leaves the United States.

— If a person marries or marriage ends.

— Any change in income of any person in the household.

— Any change in resources, what the person owns, including real estate, car, or other personal property, additions to savings account, or other investment.

— If a student stops or starts attending school regularly.

— Blind or disabled people should report any improvement in conditions, taking any job, and any change in earnings.

Someone should report for the person getting SSI payments if:

- A drug addict or alcoholic stops treatment.
- A person becomes unable to manage his or her own funds.
- A person dies.

More information about these reports can be obtained at the Wilkes-Barre Social Security office, located at Room 2227, 20 N. Pennsylvania Avenue. The telephone number is 826-6371. The people there will be glad to answer any questions.

Inmates receive degrees

The Annual Graduation Awards Ceremony at the State Correctional Institution at Dallas, was held on Friday, July 26. Mitchel DiVentura, Franklin Castle, Fortunato Ferraro and Arthur Heffelfinger, inmates at the prison, graduated with Associate Degrees from the Luzerne County Community College.

Patrick Santarocce, Executive Director of the Institute for Developmental Educational Activities at L.C.C.C. was the Commencement Speaker, and Robert Lesniak, Coordinator of Graduate Programs for the Pennsylvania State University, was the guest speaker.

A college education for deserving inmates is made possible through the efforts of the Centurion Jaycee Education Committee which was established four and one-half years ago. The Committee's goal is to turn destructive inmates into productive and contributing citizens upon their release. This goal is emphasized by their motto "Education is the key to Success."

The Education Committee was successful this past year in obtaining state funding for the program from the Department of Corrections and the Department of Education, who have agreed to continue funding the program. Now the Education Committee will turn to the development of rehabilitating programs in the educational and vocational areas.

Over the years, the Committee has been responsible for over 250 inmates receiving over 600 credits. Currently over 100 inmates participate in 12 different courses on the Associate and Bachelor levels. The Committee has also been responsible for the opening of a computer room which houses 10 computer systems for inmates who participate in the Business Data Processing Degree program. The Committee hopes to also utilize the room for tutoring inmates with special educational needs.

Anyone who desires further information on the Committee and its activities, or on their contribution program, may write to the Centurion Jaycee Education Committee, Care of William J. Jordan, Executive Director, Drawer "K", Dallas, Pennsylvania, 18612-0286.

Association aids council

At its regular meeting on July 14, the Harveys Lake Protective Association voted to help the borough fund the newly appointed Harveys Lake Environmental Advisory Council by donating $500 to the council.

The association also offered to financially sponsor a fund-raising mailing to all taxpayers. The association totally supports the idea of the advisory council.

Charles Reif, PhD, chairman of the water quality committee, had recommended a watershed authority and other ideas to the association in his water quality report for 1984. Dr. Reif will also be an advisor to the newly-appointed advisory council.

In other business, the members of the protective association voted to offer a $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone damaging, stealing, or in any way tampering with the marker buoys on Harveys Lake.

The buoys are safety devices sponsored by the Harveys Lake Protective Association under a permit for their placement with the Pennsylvania Fish Commission. They are lifetime leased to shoreline property owners for the cost of purchase and installation.
