Glass carvings enhance decor at White Horse

By CHARLOT M. DENMON
Staff Correspondent

The large, clear glass back bar reflects the paintings of horses and horseshoes on the opposite wall, and on each end of the large mirrored glass are carvings of white horses, manes flying in the wind, done by John Fervier, artist friend of Sid and Judy Silver. The artist, who did the carving in the glass, also did the carving in the Heinz Building which houses the Pittsburgh Philharmonic.

The glass back bar and the highly polished candy counter bar date back to 1910 and was purchased by the owners of the White Horse from a place in the Poconos.

Light barn wood on the walls is highlighted by a deeper patterned carpeting on the floor and the woven, roll-up shades, reveal a variety of beautiful plants along the front of the tavern.

Along the side wall are two prints by Ceci LaLoine, the only two in this area with the exception of several at Genetti's in Hazleton. The large three-dimensional plaster of paris plaque of white horse heads leaves no doubt that there is a horse lover in the family, that person being Judy Silver.
