Dining at The Reef in Exeter is an extremely enjoyable experience. A cheery atmosphere, efficient but friendly service and a wide selection of prepared-to-order entrees allows one to enjoy a leisurely evening out.

White curtains with red tie-back drapes, red table covers, red and white lampshades, tiny white sparkling lights and hanging baskets of red and white floral arrangements offer a cheerful contrast to the dark, highly polished booths, tables and other wood trim in the restaurant.

One-step booths, a slight distance from the tables in the large dining area, give diners a feeling of privacy, enabling diners to carry on conversations without being heard by other diners.

Friendly, cheerful waiters in formal attire greet diners as they enter the restaurant and escort them to their seats.

All entrees are prepared to order, so it is recommended that diners order one of the Reef's specialties, an exotic cocktail from the Orient. For the wine drinker, The Reef offers a varied selection of domestic or imported white, rose or red, chilled to perfection.

We suggest starting off with the restaurant's specialty as an appetizer, Chicken Livers wrapped in Bacon and flavored to tempt the palate. If something else is desired, one might try the clams on the half shell, clams casino, steamed clams, shrimp cocktail, or crab meat pleasing to the most particular of gourmet diners.

The Reef's French Onion Soup is "par excellence" and would be difficult to surpass by any chef.

Paul Antosh, owner of The Reef (formerly Klocko's), prides himself on providing friendly service and quality food. While his presence is not always obvious he is usually somewhere on the premises and is aware of the service and the customers likes and dislikes.

Noted for their delicious seafood, The Reef has a large variety of Land and Sea entrees, from lobster tail, King Crab, shrimp scampi, haddock, halibut, scallops, to steaks, pork chops, ham, veal cacciatore, parmigiana, Francese, marsala, chicken prepared in at least half dozen ways from half broiled chicken to Chicken Italian or Chicken Francese, to sauteed chicken livers.
