Conferences

THE PENN STATE WILKES-BARRE CAMPUS will be the reception site on Thursday, Oct. 24, for a live videoconference on cancer detection.

Medical professionals interested in the latest information on Breast Imaging are urged to register for the videoconference which will be transmitted via satellite to the campus in Lehman, the only reception site in northeastern Pennsylvania.

The need for such a sharing of information is as apparent as the statistics are frightening - 15,000 new cases of breast cancer reported each year in the United States, one in 11 females predicted to eventually develop the disease.

According to the American Cancer Society, breast cancer will kill 37,000 women this year but 7,500 of those lives could have been saved by early detection.

The videoconference will explore advances and future possibilities in early breast cancer detection. Nationally known experts in the field of breast imaging will discuss, demonstrate techniques, and answer questions regarding current and future trends in breast imaging and early detection of breast cancer.

Topics to be covered include: Breast imaging techniques; Physics of mammography; Value of mammography; Proper mammography positioning; Ultrasound; Diaphonography and magnetic resonance.

The videoconference will run from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 24, in Hayfield House, the administration building of Penn State Wilkes-Barre. An academic coordinator will be present to facilitate discussion.

The program is a continuing education service of The Pennsylvania State University, College of Medicine and the Milwaukee Area Technical College in cooperation with the National University Teleconference Network. Further information can be obtained from the Office of Continuing Education at Penn State Wilkes-Barre campus in Lehman, phone (717) 675-2171.

Workshops

"COAL AND WOODBURNING STOVES" is the title of a one-day workshop designed for fire officials, home owners, code enforcement officials and others who need to know proper installation and maintenance of the solid fuel units.

Arranged through the Pennsylvania State University College of Engineering, the program is scheduled to run from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 23, at the Holiday Inn, Route 940, White Haven.

National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) requirements will be covered as well as fire related problems, types, construction, sizing, connections, clearances, add ons, chimneys, etc.

The instructor at the workshop will be Joseph J. Ferrer, consultant to the code enforcement section of Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs. His qualifications include owning and operating his own woodburning stove for 4 1/2 years.

According to Ferrer, coal and wood stoves are the primary alternatives that Pennsylvania residents have turned to as the price of home heating has escalated. Unfortunately, the typical homeowner has limited knowledge of proper installation or maintenance.

As a result, there is an immediate need for such home owners and for fire officials, local elected officials and other persons, directly or indirectly involved with alternative forms of home heating, to educate themselves in the fundamentals of safe and efficient installation and operation.

Further information and registration forms may be obtained from the Office of Continuing Education, Penn State Wilkes-Barre, P.O. Box PSU, Lehman, Pa. 18627 or phone (717) 675-2171.

THE AMERICAN LUNG ASSOCIATION of Northeastern Pennsylvania, in conjunction with Pennsylvania Home Health Services, will sponsor a Pulmonary Workshop on Chronic Lung Diseases and how one can help themselves to better breathing.

The workshop will be held on Thursday, Nov. 7, at the Luzerne County Community College, Prospect and Middle Road, Nanticoke, and will begin at 7 p.m.

Highlights of the workshop will include a visual aide presentation of the anatomy and physiology of the respiratory system with review of Pathophysiology of Emphysema, Bronchitis, and Asthma; and a review of the diagnosis of COPD, the treatment of COPD, including medication, oxygen and equipment.

The workshop itself is primarily geared toward patients and their families but open to those who might someday be victims themselves. With early discover and treatment, people can avoid lung disease altogether, or be taught to live with the disease.
