Post lists corrections

Due to a proofreading error, the names of Anthony and Lois Macri, new owners of Overbrook Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge, Dallas, and Rosemary Zurla, mother of Mrs. Macri, were omitted under the photo of the restaurant's grand opening in Oct. 9 issue of the Post.

Due to a layout error, directions for the Banana Nut Cake published in the Oct. 16 Post Cookbook column, appeared incorrectly above the dry ingredients instead of under the list of the dry ingredients in the second column.

Our apology to Ryan Holthaus, whom we incorrectly reported as Rich Holthaus, scoring the touchdown in the Dallas-Wyoming game played Friday, Oct. 11. Ryan plays football for the Mountaineers; his brother, Rich, is a member of the Dallas golf team. Sorry, Ryan, we do know who you are.

They include such top-name performers as Lucille Ball, Raymond Burr, Farrah Fawcett, Dennis Weaver, Ellen Burstyn, and Tony Curtis. Catering to the broad interests of the television audience, these movies range from Hollywood remakes and biographies to ones dealing with social issues. To give the average TV viewer an idea of what to expect this 1985-86 season in the live of made-for-TV movies, here is a partial, selective list.

Lucille Ball stars in her first TV drama, "Stone Pillow" as a New York City bag lady who refuses to relinquish her independence when a young social worker tries to convince her to get off the streets.

"Out of the Darkness," based on New York City's Son of Sam murders, stars Martin Sheen as the detective who helps crack the case. Sheen also stars in "Shattered Spirits," a drama about alcoholism and denial.

"Picking Up the Pieces" casts Margot Kidder, James Farentino and David Aykroyd in lead roles in a drama about the effects of divorce on a child.

"Living Arrows," a touching drama about a woman who reconciles with her ailing mother-in-law, and "The Pete Fray Story," a story of a one-armed major league baseball player, will also be telecast.

Soap opera fans can see the "queen of the soaps," Susan Lucci ("All My Children"), as the Princess in the movie entitled, "Mafia Princess."

In the area of fantasy, ABC offers viewers, "The Further Adventures of the Ewoks" produced by George Lucas of "Star Wars" fame.

Other movies that might be worth watching are "Who Hears the Child's Cry?" with Lindsay Wagner playing a social worker for juveniles; "Copacabana," a musical inspired by Barry Manilow's hit song; "Lost in London," featuring Ben Vereen and Emmanuel Lewis; "Casanova," starring Richard Chamberlain as the 18th century heartthrob; Bruce Boxleitner and Barbara Hershey in "Passion Flower," a mystery; and "The Times of My Life," Betty Ford's story of cancer and drug dependence produced by David Wolper.

Regarding remakes, TV viewers are offered "Stagecoach," John Ford's 1939 classic western with Johnny Cash, Kris Kristofferson and Waylon Jennings; "I Dream of Jeannie: 15 Years Later" with Barbara Eden recreating her role as everyone's favorite genie; "Return to Mayberry" with Andy Griffith, Don Knotts, Ron Howard and Jim

Nabors reprising their roles, and "The Return of Perry Mason."

Rosemary Clooney and Bonnie Franklin are paired up in "Sister Margaret and the Saturday Night Ladies." Robert Conrad and David Soul co-star in "The Gold Crew," a film based on an American Trident sub, in which a psychological drill goes berserk and threatens to set off a third world war.

Last of all, network TV will air the three-hour dramatization of the story of Beatle John Lennon and wife Yoko Ono in "Imagine: The Story of John and Yoko."
