Conferences

ARE YOU LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE if drugs are missing from your unit? If an incident report involves a co-worker, can the individual sue you? Can a patient refuse to be restrained? When a patient is on his way to surgery, what do you do if the patient says no, and the doctor says yes?

Today, it is essential that nurses know the answers to these and other related legal questions, particularly with the rising number of malpractice suits which are filed against health care professionals each year.

For this purpose, the Office of Continuing Education at Luzerne County Community College will offer one-day seminar, "Legal Aspects of Nursing," on Friday, Nov. 15, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the college's Educational Conference Center on the main campus in Nanticoke.

This day-long seminar will outline the legal aspects of the nursing profession in Pennsylvania, with emphasis on licensure; assault and battery; rights of the dying; employment rights; informed consent; defamation; and negligence.

Program presenter is Susan D. Chenoweth, R.N., J.D., who is currently in private legal practice and consultant in medico-legal cases. Prior to establishing her own law practice, she was an Associate Trial

Attorney with Bernstein and Harrison Esquires, P.C., of Philadelphia, and has held positions as Occupational Health Nurse, Charge Nurse and Assistant Head Nurse.

A graduate of the Albert Einstein School of Nursing and Philadelphia College of Textiles and Sciences, she received a Juris Doctorate from Temple University School of Law. Chenoweth is a member of the American Association of Nurse Attorneys, Pennsylvania Bar Association, the Pennsylvania Trial Lawyers Association, and the Philadelphia Bar Association.

For more information or to register to attend contact the Office of Continuing Education at Luzerne County Community College at 829-7481.

OVER THE PAST FEW YEARS Pennsylvanians have been encouraged by the efforts on the state and local level to reduce the rising levels of crime in the Commonwealth.

The General Assembly has introduced legislation aimed at strengthening the criminal justice system, while local law enforcement officials have worked to combat the problem on our streets and in our neighborhoods.

Although these efforts are promising, citizens are not yet free from the fear of crime.

For this purpose, a panel of state and local law enforcement, investigative, victims assistance and corrections professionals will gather to examine this issue at a conference sponsored by Luzerne County Community College. The program, "War on Crime—The Pennsylvania Perspective," will be conducted on Tuesday, Nov. 19, at 7 p.m., in the Educational Conference Center on the main campus in Nanticoke, and is open to the public free of charge.

According to Fred D. Walters, Associate Professor of World Affairs and program coordinator, the crime seminar will feature presentations by Wallace P. Hay, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Crime Commission, and Erskind DeRamus, Deputy Commissioner of the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections.

For further information on the seminar, "War on Crime—The Pennsylvania Perspective," at LCCC contact Fred D. Walters at 829-7424.

ON THURSDAY, NOV. 7, at 1:45 p.m., the singing and dancing group, Re-Creation, will present an assembly at the Dallas Junior High School.

Parents and citizens of the Dallas School District are cordially invited to attend the performance. No reservations are needed. The school has decided to extend the invitation to help promote better understanding in the community of the importance of co-curricular activities and their impact on the students.

Re-Creation is affiliated with Susquehanna University located in Selinsgrove, Pa. Members of the group are students of the university who give their time to present programs at various functions that include hospitals and churches.

Miss Judy Fitch, a 1985 graduate of Dallas High School, is a member of the group and will appear in the November 7 performance.
