Alzheimer's Month named

Praising the efforts of volunteers and Pennsylvania's aging network, Governor Dick Thornburgh has proclaimed November as "Alzheimer's Disease Awareness Month."

In his proclamation, Governor Thornburgh said: "Volunteers have been instrumental in increasing public awareness of the plight of this devastating disease" and he cited several "Alzheimer's Disease Support Groups...across the state providing counseling for patients and their families..."

The Governor also noted that the Department of Aging is utilizing a $500,000 appropriation by the Legislature to launch six projects this year and next year for education, family support, training to area agencies on aging and other providers in the aging network such as the medical profession, social service professionals, and technical assistance to hospitals and medical centers.

The Department will also publish a manual on how to develop local support groups, and organize a media campaign in newspapers, radio and television to provide information to Alzheimer's sufferers and their families.

LCB votes on Happy Hour

The Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board today voted to adopt new regulations governing the practice of "Happy Hour" promotions in Pennsylvania's 20,000 taverns and restaurants.

Daniel Pennick, Chairman of the LCB, said the regulations are designed to discourage excessive consumption and represent a compromise between both sides of the issue which was the subject of statewide hearings by the LCB.

Discount pricing practices will be limited to any two consecutive hours up to 12 o'clock midnight each day. The practice of two drinks for the price of one is prohibited, but licensees may offer the same drink at half-price. In addition, the practice of offering an unlimited number of drinks for a set price will no longer be permitted.

A key exception to the new regulations will permit each licensee to offer one specific type of beverage, such as draft beer, or one specific type of drink, such as a special cocktail, at a reduced price without regard to the two hour limit. Other exceptions permit the offering of beverages with a meal package and serving indefinite amounts for catered events.

In addition to banning "two-fers" and "open bar," the regulations prohibit price changes within the selected two-hour period and serving an increased volume of one drink without a corresponding increase in price.

Pennick said the regulations will go into effect after final review by the Attorney General and Governor's Budget Office, and should be in place before the end of the year. The effective date will be announced when it is determined.
