Girls' basketball teams gear up for new season

By CHARLOT M. DENMON

With the end of the Back Mountain high schools Fall sports program, practice sessions and scrimmages will get underway for the winter team sports. Busy putting new ideas into effect are the coaches of the senior high school varsity girls basketball teams.

Head Coach Joe Martini of Lake-Lehman, who has had 30 girls out in competition for the squad, says it will be at least another week before he will be able to determine his starting players and have any idea of the team's potential.

Dallas Senior Varsity Coach Kit Karuza, however, has made some headway for the season since he has a good nucleus of players from last season returning. Seniors Kim Rinehimer and Karen Vloedman, who were starters last season, are back and Karuza expects these two to play a key role in the team's success throughout the season. As co-captains, they will be counted on to lead the other members of the Four other letter winners returning are Lori Brokenshire, Eileen Walsh, Angie Kern and Joann Cook. Karuza expects Brokenshire to develop as one of the best guards in the league. A fifth player, who played a lot last season, and is expected to perform well this year is sophomore Missy Kohli.

"This gives us a good nucleus to build around," said Karuza. "We also have Patti Sudol, Tammy Daveski and Angela Chiarucci, juniors who also did a lot of varsity playing last season. We have a lot of depth and experience this year, a variation tion from other years. In the past we have had depth but not with a lot of experience.'

Twenty six girls signed papers indicating intention to play, but from the first 24 who came out the number has narrowed to 20, a number with which Karuza believes is workable. There are a lot of sophomores competing this year, many of them showing excellent potential.

Among these are Rene Balberchak, Susan Starolis and Eileen Kalinowski. Others are progressing rapidly and it looks like an exciting season for the Dallas girls team. There are a few freshmen practicing with the team and Karuza indicated that it was possible he might move one or two up to the varsity squad but not before he discussed the move with Junior High Coaches Tom Kilduff and Bill Straitiff.

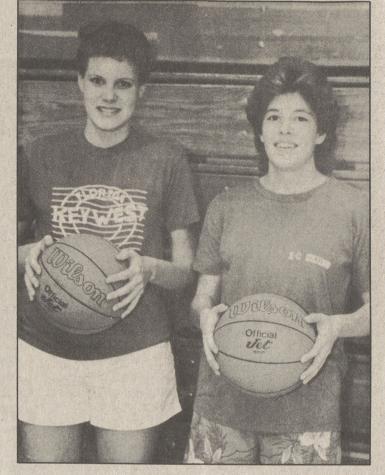

Both of these men have coached unior high teams in the past, although not in the past few seasons. Karuza believes the fact the two coaches are at junior high will be beneficial to the program. They will be able to recruit girls early and bring them up through the

The Dallas team does not have many transfers into the team during the past year or two but the program has been successful and Karuza attributes much of this to the junior high program.

Despite losing last year's Cheryl Gavigan and Kim Rollman, high scorers and Gavigan, tob rebounder, Karuza said he has other players who can take their place and he is looking forward to this year's league play.

Last year the Dallas team was considered a young team but after losing their first two games, the team won 19 of their next 20 games. This year they should be a strong contender although it may take a while for the players to come together as a team.

Karuza is changing the team's style of play this year since he does not have much height as in previous seasons. it wil lbe a season of transition to a smaller team in height, so the team will probably play more aggressive ball and run the ball a lot more. Walsh, Brokenshire and Rinehimer are speedsters and the others work at getting into the flow of play.

The method of play will make the team more open to mistakes but it will be more exciting. On defense. the team will, as in the past, use 1-3-1 but will use more man-to-man and more zone and on offense, they will incorporate many new methods. Overall, Karuza expects the team to play with more sophistication.

The Dallas girls will continue to do what they do best - dump the ball down the inside. This year there are five or six on the team who are high scorers at any given time. If their opponents key on any one player, someone else can take the ball to score. The Dallas team will use a lot of "gimmick" defense this season to compensate for less Coach Karuza believes the Lady Mountaineers toughest competition will be Meyers with five back from last season, and Seton Catholic, with four returning from last season. He said Lake-Lehman is always tough and Crestwood has a very tall team this season. Wyoming Seminary is always capable of pulling an upset and this year has a good center and an outstanding freshman.

The key to Dallas' success this season is not to take any team for granted. They can't be defeated by an upset from a team they are capable of defeating.

Dallas girls open in the Tunkhannock Tournament, Dec. 7, playing either Montrose or Blue Ridge. They play Nanticoke, away, Dec. 10; Benton, away, Dec. 16; Pittston Area, at home, Dec. 23; and South Williamsport, at home Dec. 29, 2 p.m. They also play two league games in December, Northwest and Chet Williams

Bass pro looks favorably upon algae at lake

By JOHN F. KILDUFF Staff Correspondent

Dallas, Pa.'s resident Bass Pro, Chet Williams of 134 Tunkhannock Highway, has an unusual way of looking at the algae problem at Harveys Lake.

While many area fishermen, boaters and swimmers grimmace at the thought of going near a "green lake," Williams says the murky water provides an ideal fishing con-

"I know some people might take this the wrong way," said Williams. "But if Harveys Lake was green year-round, it (Harveys Lake) would be one of the best fishing lakes in the state of Pennsylvania.'

Williams said fish tend look for places to hide during the day because the sunlight hurts their eyes. That is why most of the large fish in Harveys Lake tend to be caught in the middle of the lake. 'The greenish tint of the lake means the fish will come closer to the shoreline because they cannot be frightened off as easily," said

Williams said when the Anabaena algea problem surfaced this past summer he caught some real lunk-ers during the pannick. "One day the channel 16 TV crew was out at the lake filming the algea problem," Williams remembers. "That same day I caught a nice 5 and half pound large mouth." Williams, who has been fishing professionally for the past seven years, said he has two basic secrets to catching large quantities of fish fish scent liquids and multiple casting in a single area. "You know you will go out fishing and you are bound to see some fishermen running around a lake trying to find that right spot," said Williams. "Sometimes they will hit 50 different spots on a lake. Not me," Williams said emphatically. "I'll fish in one or two spots and make multiple casts. Said Williams, "In any given lake 90 percent of the fish are located in 10 percent of the water. So you must find the hot spot and continue to cast into the same area. The fish will find you, not the other way around."

Williams, who makes himself available to community organizations as a speaker, has been fishing for over 20 years. He currently ranks number 10 out of 250 fishermen in the Northeast Division of the Redman Chewing Tobacco Fishing

Fishing, said Williams, is a sport which separates the men from the boys when it comes to determina-

"Fishing in tournaments is much different than weekend fishing," said Williams. "You sometimes have 30 degree weather and 40 mile an hour winds to contend with. But a tournament fisherman will be out there under any condition.

Williams, 41, said "Fishing the the really adverse weather is what seperates the men from the boys. You can also catch some the the biggest fish in the worst weather, Williams said.

Of course, said Williams, you must use common sense. "I do not mean to tell people to go out and fish when the waves are splashing into their boat. You just have to exercise common sense," Williams

Williams also smashed the old myth of having to fish early in the morning to catch fish. The Dallas resident said he does some of his best fishing around 12 noon.

"When the sun begins to rise in the morning the fish head for the middle of the body of water," Williams said. "You as the fisherman must follow the fish out into the deeper water and go after them."

Williams said the average fisher-man is spoiled as a child by fishing in area ponds. The ponds, according to Williams, are the most active fishing areas because the ponds are not very deep and the water tends to be murky (green). These conditions are supposedly the best for

"The problem with the average fisherman," said Williams, "is that they fish the same style and depth when they fish a lake." "Ofcourse the lake is a lot deeper and requires more skill.'
