Grants are available

High School and College students interested in receiving additional financial aid to attend college should write to The Scholarship Bank for a free copy of their new publication "How to Play Grantsmanship."

According to the director of this non-profit service, there are literally thousands of private financial aid sources for students interested in supplementing state and federal grants. The money comes from corporations, trade and civic groups, foundations and little-known governmental agencies. In many cases the funds are made available to students with a specific major or occupational goal or an interest in summer internships. For 1986 the data bank has over 2,500 new summer internships.

Students with a college major in business, law, health sciences, engineering and the like should apply early for fall semester grants.

Students interested in receiving the free publication and further information should send a business-size, stamped self-addressed envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 4626 N. Grand, Covina, CA 91724.
