

Library auction filled with fun, funds

Presentation made

Senator Charles D. Lemmond is shown here making a presentation for the Back Mountain Memorial Library's "Design a Bookstore Bookmark Contest." The contest, sponsored by the volunteer department to promote the bookstore, was held in conjunction with the Children's Auction, part of the annual library auction.

Auction logo

The 40th Annual Back Mountain Memorial Library Auction, signified here with its logo made of wood, was not dampened by the inclement weather that plagued a good part of the five-day period, but rather managed to raise a good deal of money for the local library.

Children bid, too!

The Children's Auction is always a big part of the library auction as some children are shown here, bidding for some items they'd like to have.

Blazer raffled

This 1986 S-10 Chevy blazer went home at the end of the auction with its proud new owner, Francis McManus of Harveys Lake. McManus, along with hundreds of others, purchased raffle tickets in an attempt to lay claim to the blazer.

New auction block

The brand new auction block, shown here, which was constructed at the rear of the new Back Mountain Memorial Library on Huntsville Road in Dallas, was filled to capacity with antiques, just waiting to be auctioned off.

Starting young

The littlest auction-goer, maybe? This young man, attending the auction during the early part of the week when the temperatures soared, kept cool by wearing a straw hat and eating lots and lots of ice-cream.
