Lake Township has new building

By CHARLOT M. DENMON
Staff Correspondent

The supervisors and taxpayers of the Lake Township held an open house and dedication Saturday at the township building on Route 29 in Loyalville. A new building to house the township road department equipment, located behind the municipal building, was turned over to the supervisors by Contractor Charles Cann of Huntingdon Mills. The building was constructed at a cost of $15,485 without the use of Federal Revenue-sharing Funds.

Rep. George Hasay commended the supervisors and the taxpayers association for their contribution to making the building possible by being frugal during the past few years. He presented the supervisors with an American flag which had been flown over the Capitol. Mrs. Paul Kanjorski, representing her husband who was in session with Congress, also praised the people who worked so hard to make the building possible and presented the taxpayers association with an American flag. Sen. Charles Lemmond also addressed the supervisors and taxpayers and commended them for their excellent partnership.

Other dignitaries and officials present included Luzerne County Republican Chairman Thomas Reese, Dorrance Kocher, secretary of the Taxpayers Association; Fred Wisniewski, Walter Hoover, Robert Grey, township supervisors; Ruth Valick, secretary to the supervisors; Lake Township Police Chief John Judge; Bill Hagenbach, Howard Kocher, patrolmen; Rev. Lawrence Reed; Ron Kamage, township solicitor; Larry Meeker, road foreman; Mrs. Stephanie Wychock, Democrat candidate for Representative.

Dorrance Kocher explained that the Taxpayers Association was organized in 1979 and, since that time, members have purchased and erected road signs, presented six fire and ambulance associations with maps of the area, unsuccessfully tried to save the landfill, successfully obtained government surplus food for residents. The association has also assisted in making possible the modern municipal building which includes housing for the police car, road trucks, office for the chief of police and large storage rooms, and the latest, the 40x60 foot building to house road equipment.

Social Security news

A firm calling itself "Social Security Monitoring Service," is advertising throughout the country offering to perform a service for a fee that Social Security provides at no cost whatsoever, Thomas Lavelle, Social Security manager in Wilkes-Barre, said recently.

The advertising takes the form of card-inserts in Magazines, inserts in bills or bank statements, cable television advertisements, and other forms of direct mail advertising.

The firm says that, for a fee of $5 a year, it will provide people with information from their Social Security earnings record.

People can get an earnings statement free of charge if they ask at any Social Security office for a "Request for Statement of Earnings" (Form SSA-7004PC), fill it out, and mail it. In a few weeks they will get a copy of their earnings recorded by Social Security. This firm can do no more.

The firm's advertising infers that Social Security keeps a record of the Social Security taxes paid. This is not so. The only record Social Security has is of earnings covered under Social Security that have been reported by employers and self-employed people.

The ad also indicates that only the person involved can correct any errors in his or her Social Security record. The person, can, of course, take action to correct any error in his or her record. But, in addition,

Social Security will correct the errors whenever they are brought to its attention.

Social Security does encourage people to check their records every three years or more often if they change jobs frequently. This way, any errors that occur can be corrected in a timely fashion.

People who would like to check their Social Security record or who have any questions about Social Security should contact the Wilkes-Barre office, located at Room 2227, Penn Place. The telephone number is 826-6371.

Denmon takes charge of first place

Charlot Denmon lost only one contest this weekend and pulled way ahead of her counterparts with an overall 37-8 slate. Hot on Denmon's tail last week was Jack Jones who garnered a mere two wins this week to sport an overall slate of 34-11. Tied with Jones for second place are Doty Martin and GoalPOST Petie who also have 34-11 records.

John Hoinski and John Oliver are locked in at third place at 31-14.

Oliver, who finished with a perfect 5-0 slate this weekend, was right on the money in the Notre Dame/Alabama contest, giving the Fighting Irish the edge. The Notre Dame boys embarrassed the other Dallas Post prognosticators by whipping Air Force, 31-3.

Denmon was right on all games except the Notre Dame/Air Force match-up as were Martin and Petie. Hoinski and Jones, who both lost three this week, missed on the Dallas/GAR game where the Grenadiers skunked the Mountaineers, 21-0. The pair also missed the Bishop O'Reilly/Columbia-Montour County game where the Queensmen picked up an 18-6 victory as well as the Notre Dame/Air Force contest.

This week, the prognosticators are unanimous in the Crestwood/Bishop O'Reilly game, going with the Comets all the way. There is a split in opinion in the Dallas/Nanticoke game as Oliver and Pete side with the Trojans while their counterparts are being true-blue to the Mountaineers.

Oliver likes the Nittany Lions over Alabama while every one else sides with Alabama. Martin and Jones are giving Navy an edge over Pitt while their counterparts choose the Panthers. And again, Wyoming Seminary is a unanimous choice over Williamson.
