Entertainment

"One of the reasons CSA was founded (in 1980) was because casting professionals go unrewarded, from both a monetary and psychological sense," says Mike Fenton, president of the association. The Casting Society of America comprises approximately 185 members from Los Angeles, New York, and Chicago.

In the fall of 1986, nine crystal obelisks, seven regular awards and two honorary awards, will be presented by celebrity hosts at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. The awards are given to recognize the efforts of casting directors who go unrecognized and to enhance their position in the entertainment industry.

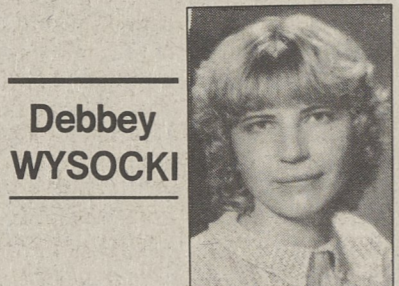

An honorary award will be presented to Ethel Winant, VP of talent for NBC Television. The Hoyt Bowers Award will be given to Owen McLean, retired senior VP in charge of talent at 20th Century Fox, for outstanding contributions to the casting profession.

Nominees for Outstanding Achievement in Dramatic Episodic Casting are Eugene Blythe ("St. Elsewhere"), Reuben Cannon and Carol Dudley ("Moonlighting"), Lois Planco ("The Equalizer"), Sally Powers ("Hill Street Blues"), and last but not least, Diane Dimeo for McLean-Dimeo & Associates ("Cagney & Lacey"). Dimeo won last year's Artios Award for casting in this category.

Nominees for Outstanding Achievement in Feature Film Casting in Dramas are Jackie Burch for "Mask"; Reuben Cannon for "The Color Purple"; Dianne Crittenden for "Witness"; Wally Nicita for "Silverado"; and Penny Perry for "Cocoon."

Outstanding Achievement in Miniseries or Longform Casting: Eleanor Cooke for "Wallenberg: A Hero's Story"; Phyllis Huffman and Jennifer Jackson Part for "North and South, Book I"; Marsha Kleinman for "The Long Hot Summer"; Marsha Kleinman and Kathleen Letterie for "Atlanta Child Murders"; and Lynn Stalmasters and David Rubin for "Space."
