Penn State Wilkes-Barre will launch a series of technology information programs, will host a regional dinner meeting of local professional engineers and will sponsor the local JETS TEAMS high school competition as part of a series of events celebrating National Engineers' Week, Feb. 21-27.

The first in a new series of Wednesday night "Hot Careers in Technology" programs will feature information about Electrical Engineering Technology, Biomedical Equipment Technology, and Telecommunication Technology. The program will be held Wednesday, Feb. 24 from 6-8 p.m. in Hayfield House 105. All high school students are invited, as well as anyone who thinks they may be interested in a career in any of these growing technology fields. Industry experts as well as faculty and career counselors will be on hand to provide information and answer questions about job descriptions, requirements, and Penn State associate degree programs that can prepare students for a career in just two years. Among the Penn State Wilkes-Barre faculty who will be on hand include Robert S. Paranch, associate professor of electrical engineering; Harold A. Groff, assistant professor of telecommunication; and Dr. Richard Aston, associate professor of engineering.

For more information and about any of the above mentioned programs, contact Helen Stager at Penn State Wilkes-Barre at 675-9276.
