Library notes

BY NANCY KOZEMCHAK
Library Correspondent

An interesting helper tucked away on the shelves of many libraries is a small booklet titled, "Cliff Notes". The Back Mountain Memorial Library has quite a few of these booklets shelved in the non-fiction section with the books written about the person they refer to. Across the USA you can hear it - kids flipping pages, cramming for exams with Cliffs Notes, the controversial 'student guides' that are black and yellow and read all over. The Notes, which have sold 85 million, will have played to mixed reviews for 30 years this summer. While students cherish this fast food for thought, some teachers revile it. These quickie plot summaries and character analyses are supervised here by Clifton Hille-gass. Cliff is 70 years old and an active mini-mogul of publishing with trademark bolo tie and purple ultrasuede jacket. One teacher states 'Cliffs Notes are a Band-Aid approach; but, they can be a useful tool, a crutch, if they don't become a substitute'. Hille-gass responds, 'They were never intended to be a substitute!' So, Cliffs Notes are valuable and are referred to as 'paragraphs that speak volumes'.

The library is very fortunate to have two fine women working for us through the Office of the Aging. They are Jane Klem and Dorothy Park who man the front circulation desk, slip and shelve returned books, and check out books for patrons. This service is offered as a training program to a host agency for a two year period, at the end of which, the person is either hired by the agency or transferred to another agency. These women are a great service to the library staff and help with many of the routine chores.

In addition to an on-going memorial book program, the library has an honorary book program, which is a nice way to remember someone with the purchase of a book for the library in their name to honor any occasion, birthday, anniversary or any special time. Two recent honorary books were donated the mothers of the students of the Trinity Nursing School. "Waving: A Counting Book" by Peter Sis in honor of Mrs. Joan Kingsbury and Mrs. Sally Davenport and "Fox Dream" by Keizaburo Teijima in honor of Mrs. Edith Pillarella and Mrs. Nancy Kiggins.

A feature of the 42nd library auction will be the chancing off of a 1988 1/2 Ford Escort 2-door liftback car. The auction will be held July 6 through the 10th and the drawing for the car will be held Sunday night, July 10. Chances are $5.00 each and can be purchased at the front desk at the library or from board, staff or auction committee members.
