"All Women Work" was the theme of the Fourth Annual Luzerne County Woman's Conference held Saturday, June 4, at Penn State Wilkes-Barre Campus and Barbara Ehrenreich, principal speaker at the conference, emphasized that fact in her address to the more than 400 women in attendance.

Ehrenreich told the audience that every woman works whether at home, as a career person or as a volunteer in the community. She stressed that women should be able to assume the role of leadership and to become actively involved whether politically or in other roles in the community.

The author of several books and articles in magazines, Ehrenreich has a Ph.D. in biology and a baccalaureate degree from Rockefeller University. She is also a fellow at the Institute for Policies in Washington, D.C. and the New York Institute for Humanities at New York University.

Evelyn Albert, coordinator of the conference, can be proud of the success of the conference which was described by many of the women who attended as best ever.

Ages of those attending this year's conference varied from teenagers to the older woman, who is entering the work force for the first time.
