ment without proper planning, but the younger citizens in the area would like to have the public beaches and recreational spots that development could help create. "I believe that some council members and the mayor are holding down development because certain older citizens want to keep the lake private. Thirty years ago Harveys Lake was a booming business area, and development will help bring the people and money back in," said resident Alan Witko. Michelle Boice, wife of council member Rick Boice and a former council member, agrees, "We need to generate more taxes into this community, and I can't be against a project that will create funds. The people who attended the last planning commission meeting came with their minds made up, not to listen". Currently the planning commis-repairs at a cost Dallas Water Company manager Joseph Salla was unable to estimate. Salla believes that the damage was intentional sabotage by a person or persons, who knew what they were doing since the person knew how to disconnect the controls to the pump and cut the wires without electrocuting himself. As soon as the Salla Well was damaged, the interconnecting pump between Shavertown and Dallas safety switch turned off that pump and in a short time tanks of Natona, Culver and Aldrin Drive in Rose Village lost most of their supply of water. "I knew everything was going too smoothly," said Andrea Molski of Stonehedge on Monday, July 4. "With the long weekend I had a feeling something would happen to the water supply but I never expected sabotage. The person who damaged the Salla Well has to be sick. Why make thousands of people suffer. It's difficult to comprehend." The early part of last week, Stonehedge residents were willing to place wagers that despite having plenty of water for more than a week, the long July 4 weekend would cause another shortage. If they had been serious about placing bets, Andrea Molski would have been the winner. Just as she predicted, as of 4:35 p.m., Friday, July 1, once again the residents were without water. "Fortunately, this time it was only a period of hours instead of days when the water started flowing through the pipes," Andrea said. "It was a rusty brown color and not fit to drink but at least we had water for sanitary purposes." Dallas Township Police Chief Carl Miers and Kingston Township Paul Sabol, Dallas Township patrolman Elliott Ide and Kingston Township Gary Beisel were on the scene of the vandalism on Saturday. If the person or persons who vandalized the well are found, they will face federal and state charges of criminal mischief, Felony 3, which could carry a maximum seven-year jail sentence and or maximum fine of $15,000.

sio. is still reviewing the issue and a final hearing date has not been set. When a formal application is submitted by Al-Sar, the zoning commission will decide if a special exception regarding specific residential zoning requirements should be made for the development. The Luzerne County Commissioners will then review the project.

"Special exceptions to residential zoning requirements have been granted before, but nothing as major as this. This project and all the factors involved will be considered as a separate entity, and I can't say whether or not this will set a precedent for future development in the area," said Francis Kopko, Chairman of the Harveys Lake zoning board.

At press time the plan for a townhouse development at Harveys Lake remains just that, still a plan with no building in sight.

homeowners must be used to correct code violations in their homes and also to properly winterize their buildings. Homeowners may also use some of the funds to renovate their property.

Kingston Township manager Fred Potzer explained that there are approximately 800 houses in the Trucksville project area with emphasis placed on structures in Trucksville Gardens, Cliffside Terrace and Highland Avenue.

Phase II of the program amounts to $171,000 and is proposed to include Carverton Road, and storm drains and resurfacing Cliffside Terrace, Meadowcrest, Highland and parts of Spring Garden streets. Phase II would be financed through a $50,000 CIP grant obtained through LCRA in addition to other funding sources.

Potzer applied for the grant last year but the township was placed on the alternate list and Potzer was advised to re-apply this year. He expects LCRA to do its utmost to select the township for the grant this year.

the tour done two years ago and that it was nothing but a "sham". "We did nothing after spending hours touring the buildings and grounds," Jones said. Sichler supported Jones on his motion and said "Let's prevent band-aid treatment."

Board members approved by an 8-0 vote, the appointment of three substitutes for the 1988-1989 year including Filomena C. Costantino, Wilkes-Barre, mathematics; Madelyn Koch, Shavertown, mathematics; David Rittenhouse, Plymouth, industrial arts.

The directors also approved unanimously the request to waive graduation requirements for Ainsley Rowlands, Lake-Lehman student, who will be a Rotary Exchange student to Argentina during the 1988-1989 school year. Dr. Borchetta recommended approval of the waiver and explained that Ainsley is aware that she must satisfy the curriculum regulations of the Commonwealth Department of Education and the Lake-Lehman District requirements for graduation.

SPCA received over 9,000 unwanted pets last year

During the summer months the SPCA of Luzerne County is inundated with litters upon litters of unwanted puppies and kittens. How unfortunate their owners did not have their female dog-cat spayed.

More unfortunate for the SPCA who then receives these unplanned, unwanted pets. There just aren't enough good homes for them all. The SPCA received just over 9,000 animals last year.

Although the SPCA is open weekdays 8 a.m. til 8 p.m. and weekends 8 a.m. til 4 p.m. for receiving stray-unwanted pets, there are those who will abandon puppies and kittens in front of the building on busy E. Main Street. This both endangers the lives of the pet and motorist.

Abandonment of an animal is a summary offense in Pennsylvania Section 5511 (c) of the Pa. Crimes Code and is punishable by a fine of maximum $300.00 and or imprisonment for not more than 90 days.

Two animals up for adoption this week are a female orange dish cat named Sunkist who is housebroken, and a white dwarf rabbit by the name of Howard. Howard is 2½ years old. Visiting adoption hours are weekdays 11 to 3, 5 to 7 and Saturday and Sunday, 11 to 3.
