

Frucksville neighbors throw old fashioned block party

By SARA J. LUNDBERG Managing Editor

Both young and old got together for an old fashioned neighborhood block party off Orchard Street in Trucksville Sunday, August 7.

People who had been neighbors for decades, and people who are new to the area and wanted to get know each other came to the ck party. There was food to keep everyone happy and games to keep people busy, but there were also something else not quite as easy to measure. A sense of com-

The community that is glimpsed by a shared history of days past when the neighborhood was surrounded by farmland and traveled by dirt roads and trolley cars. When one knew all his neighbors by their first names, as well as the gerations that followed.

The people who live there remember the past.

When I was a little girl growing here everyone used to go to the same church down the street," resident Ruth Merrel talks of the year 1910 and what life used to be like in the Back Mountain.

"There was two or three trains running to a lumber community in Noxen. When I was younger I remember having to be home with the mail train at 4:00," said Ruth.

Betty Reese used to sled down Caverton Road as a child. She lived with her family for a period of time in a home that was dubbed the 'Island House' because it sat between the creek and the Dallas Memorial highway.

Another neighbor, June Bennett, was a columist for the Post in 1928. At the age of 14 she wrote her observations about what was happening in the neighborhood. The column was called the 'Trucksville News' and publisher Howard Risley paid June 22 cents a column.

"It seemed like a lot of money at the time," said June.

Four women who live in the neighborhood had been talking about having the get together for several years before it finally

"With more and more families moving into the area we thought it would be a good idea to have a neighborhood get together. It would be a good way of getting to know each other," said Colette Check who helped plan the event.

Talk at the block party centered not only on history, but on family and community. There was discussion about marriages, children, new people moving into the area, and loved ones who have passed

Maybe life on this block hasn't changed as much as it seems. The essential patterns of life remain the

Our Dinosaur Summer display, being presented by the children of the Back Mountain who have loaned us a dinosaur, will be coming to an end on August 17. A very special thank you to the children who brought their dinosaurs in and they can now return home anytime after the 17th. One new addition in the last week was a baby saurus in a pretty shade of orange brought in by Todd Butcher who is 8 years old.

I had the privilege of meeting Norman Bridwell, the creator of Clifford the Big Red Dog, while attending the American Library Association gala celebration in New York City a few years ago. Clifford the Big Red Dog has been special to me because of my son's name and he has many of the books about Clifford, and now, so does Elizabeth. Bridwell, the best selling author of more than 34 Clifford books, states "I think Clifford's success is based on his not being perfect." Clifford the Big Red Dog will be celebrating his 25th anniversary in 1988. He is every child's idea of what a dog should really

Tips for a safe return to school

It's that time of year again. School is just around the corner and kids are anxiously awaiting their first day back to class. Leo Landau, M.D., a pediatrician on staff at Nesbitt Memorial Hospital, Kingston, says that children yeen the ages of three and six be veen the ages of three as they start the new school year.

The following tips will help make your child's school year safer.

-A crossing guard must be on duty when a young child is crossing

-Children must know how to look left, right, then left again, before crossing the street.

-When a child goes to school for the first time, he or she must be instructed to go home with family members only. -Children should never take a ride from strangers to or from school when walking.

-A child should never talk', someone they don't know.

-A child should never take candy, food or drink from a stranger.
