graders at Lake-Lehman High School is up by 5% from last year at this time.

Borchetta said the increase in attendance is most dramatic for seniors, for whom attendance is up to 94% from an 82% average attendance last year at this time.

"Our philosophy is that it is important for students to attend school on a regular basis for social interaction, as well as a consistent education," said Borchetta.

The attendance policy links grade reduction and possible loss of credits with unauthorized absences.

In other business a motion was passed to accept the resignation of William F. Peters, Social Studies teacher at the Junior High School, and board action was taken to approve several individuals for supplemental contracts for the coaching positions in the 1988-89 school year.

The reorganization meeting of the Board of School Directors of the Lake-Lehman School District will be held Tuesday, December 6, 1988 at 7:30 p.m. in the Library of the Lehman-Jackson Elementary School, Lehman. A committee-of-the-whole meeting will follow the reorganization meeting and be held in the boardroom of the Lehman-Jackson Elementary School.

ence that Dallas High School student John Gregg was winner of the Century III scholarship; Julie Orloski winner of the Leadership scholarship; Susan Wells recipient of the DAR scholarship and David Lieberman, the Hugh O'Brien scholarship.

The directors approved a resolution to appoint Jean Utter, faculty member, as the district's Teacher Induction support teacher for Carole Hayden; Florence Sherwood, faculty member, as induction support teacher for Todd Hunter; and Rita Bren, R.N., as induction support nurse for Linda Burd at the rate of $500 each.

At the request by Director Ellen

Nagy, Wycallis explained that the induction program was initiated in May, 1987, to appoint professional employees to acquaint new employees with the policies and procedures of the district and conduct a general orientation program as a team approach. Wycallis said that at completion of the program, results are kept on file in the administrative offices.

The board approved the addition of 183 adult volunteers, 10 at Dallas Elementary and 173 at Westmoreland, to assist the administrators and staff in the two schools.

Nancy Nelen was appointed by an 8-0 vote as sophomore and junior class advisor after a lengthy discussion by the directors and faculty members in the audience.

Director James Richardson asked if there was a problem getting teachers to accept these positions, and if so, was it because of the minimal amount of money paid for the positions. High school principal Frank Galicki said there was a problem but it was not because of the money but because of teachers' additional responsibilities as well as more responsibilities in their homes. He also cited the increased difficulty in working with the students as another factor.

Dallas Education Association

president William Wagner disagreed, saying that many of the teachers are reluctant to accept such positions because of the possibility of legal problems, not because of lack of concern for the students. Wagner recommended that the board meet with him to discuss some of the problems involved. Nagy said she would like to have the board pursue the problem for the future, a statement with which the other directors agreed.

Ted Jackson was appointed as weight lifting coach in the Dallas Senior High School for the 1988-1989 school year.

Hit and run

Kingston Township police officer Robert Weiss reported that Leonard Goss, RD 1, Dallas, while traveling north on Route 309 in his 1976 Ford van was struck by a small white car traveling south that crossed into his lane, damaging the left rear of the van. The white car left the scene of the accident and went on. Investigation is continuing.

Man hurt in roll-over

Kingston Township police reported that Mark Mikolaichik of Kingston Township, Wyoming, while traveling up Dug Road shifted into third gear to pull up the hill and went off the road onto the berm. He turned the wheel of his vehicle to the left, slid across the roadway into the driveway of Dave and Pam Zisco. His vehicle went across the lawn, rolled over onto the roof of the vehicle and into flowers and trees stopping in the front yard of the Zisko's property. Mikolaichik was taken by Kingston Township ambulance to Nesbitt Memorial Hospital for treatment.

When Hampel returned home he discovered pry marks on the door, damages to the interior door frame, lights on in the house and kitchen cabinets open. Kingston Twp. Supervisors table requests to take over roads

The Kingston Township Supervisors tabled requests from Woodridge Associates regarding taking over ownership of the development's roads, as well as discussed an ordinance intended to stop trucks from detouring through Main Street from Route 309 at their meeting last Wednesday.

Township Manager Jeffery Box said that the supervisors tabled the request by Woodridge Associates to assume ownership of the roads in Woodridge II Subdivision until there is a complete review of the roads by the township engineer and the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

"The board will not formally accept control of the roads until certain conditions are met, and we can verify that the road is in good shape," said Box.

There will be a second reading of the truck ordinance at the December 14th meeting of the Kingston Township Supervisors, where a vote will be taken on the proposal to ban trucks from Main Street. Trucks detouring from Route 309 to Main Street to avoid traffic and construction have caused hazardous conditions on that street.

In other business the Supervisors also tabled the request by Woodridge Associates to begin selling lots in Woodridge II Subdivision until agreement for maintenance of retention ponds is reviewed by the township solicitor, and tabled the request by Cedar Lane Associates for the Township to assume ownership of the roads in Cedar Lane Subdivision Phase I, pending review by the township engineer.

The supervisors also voted to accept the planning commission recommendation to give preliminary plan approval to the Hidden Acres subdivision contingent upon corrections recommended by Township Engineer Christopher Borton.

Water company says new well will be finished soon

By CHARLOT M. DENMON

Dallas-Shavertown Water Company manager Michael Coyle said Tuesday he hopes to have the Schooley well on line by the end of the week. The well is located near the College Manor and Elmcrest developments and will serve those and the Stonehedge areas.

"We started flushing the well and everything seems to be in order. Sterilization needs to be done and that takes time, but if no problems occur, the well should be ready by the end of the week," Coyle said.

Coyle also said that the Hassold well, which was contaminated and shut down earlier this year, will probably be replaced by a new well and treated with aeration. The company, however, has no plans for the contaminated Natona well which is and will remain off the system.

Coyle explained that the reason Stone Hedge residents were without water recently was due to a contractor working on a tie-in to the Bluff Pointe development, a job which should have taken about a half hour but some errors made by the workers caused a serious problem. Because of the mistakes, the work developed into a six or seven hour project.

He also said the company interconnectable pump between Shavertown and Dallas will continue as a back-up for emergencies. "We have no intentions of taking that off the line," Coyle said.
