Rose Ann Wroblewski teaches life skills at state prison

When Rose Ann Wroblewski, a benefits assistant for C-TEC Corporation in Wilkes-Barre, goes to teach her class, she doesn't go to a traditional school or college...and her students are not exactly traditional students. Wroblewski's class is at the State Correctional Institution in Dallas (SCID) and her students are inmates there.

Since 1983, Wroblewski has been involved in Thresholds, a national organization that teaches inmates the correct way to approach the decision-making process. The program was founded by Mike Burgess, M.D., M.P.H., a former prison inmate. He believes that many criminals' problems originate from poor decision-making skills. They act first before they think through the situation. Thresholds is a program designed to teach inmates those skills.

The Thresholds program is conducted at SCID in the Fall and Spring (ten-week cycles). Each week of its course, selected inmates participate in one night of general instruction on the principles of decision-making and one night of a one-on-one follow-up session with a volunteer. In this session, inmates discuss how these principles can be applied to problems in their own lives.

Because Thresholds is a voluntary organization, the size of each session depend upon the number of volunteers. As Wroblewski states: "We usually average between seven to 11 volunteers. There are always many more inmates that request the program that we can actually accommodate in one session. We try to reach out first to those prisoners whose know will be out of prison in a short period of time; however, we have had several life inmates in our classes."

Wroblewski first became interested in the program while obtaining an associate degree in Criminal Justice at Luzerne County Community College. Now pursuing a degree in Human Resources Management at King's College, she maintains her involvement with the program.

When asked if she had any fears or apprehensions about working in the prison environment, Wroblewski responds, "Many people do feel uncomfortable in this type of situation. Even though we are inside the prison, you will not find a guard standing outside each of our session rooms. So I would have to say that yes, we're all hesitant at first. Then, you learn that the inmates are just people, and that fear goes away. You develop a bond with the inmates—a mutual respect. I'm not afraid. In fact, I've told many people that I often feel safer with my students than I would feel walking down the street."

Wroblewski resides in Shavertown with her husband, Robert, and their four daughters Justine, Kimberly, Shannon and Nicole.
