Victims Resource Center has new '800' number

Janet Pencek, Program Coordinator at the Victims Resource Center in Tunkhannock, announces a new service for residents of Wyoming County, an 800 number. According to Pencek, "This 800 number will make VRC services to victims of violent crimes more accessible to the people of Wyoming County whether their victimization is domestic violence, robbery, sexual assault, or murder of a loved one."

The new number is 1-800-331-3261. Rural residents have already used the VRC hotline on a 24-hour basis, but the new 800 number offers free accessibility. All direct VRC services provided to crime victims and their families are free and confidential.

New Pennsylvania Career Guide is available now

Gov. Robert P. Casey recently announced publication of the fourth edition of the Pennsylvania Career Guide, designed to help young people and adults learn more about careers, job training and educational opportunities in the Commonwealth.

"This latest issue of the Career Guide comes at an exciting time for all Pennsylvanians, as our state's economy continues producing jobs in record numbers," Gov. Casey said.

"High school students, college graduates just entering the job market and adults contemplating a career change will find the Career Guide one of the most useful resources available to make informed choices as rapid economic changes make career decisions especially challenging."

The Career Guide provides up-to-date information on job opportunities, wages, and the major types of employers in the Commonwealth.

Special articles offer suggestions on how to conduct a job search and choose a college or training program, obtain financial aid, and identify opportunities for advanced technical training.

The guide also describes the importance of taking part in community service projects. Such participation directly benefits the community while strengthening and expanding skills that individuals may need in future careers.
