Dallas Middle School classes study other cultures

Two seventh grade classes of Dallas Middle School world cultures students recently completed a cultural scrapbook, under the guidance of Mr. William Roberts. This research project required that the students write a formal letter to the ambassador of their research country asking for information that would help in preparing their scrapbook. The students researched areas dealing with government, history, industrial growth and natural resources. Maps, charts and written reports were prepared to reflect the information discovered.

The scrapbooks resulted in the students gaining an appreciation and understanding of foreign cultures.

Exchange student presents gift book to Misericordia

In an act of appreciation, Margie Goetsch, a Rotary Exchange Student from South Africa, recently presented the book "Panoramic South Africa" to Dr. Mary Glennon, RSM, College Misericordia's academic dean. The book will be added to the college library.

Margie studied anthropology, psychology, philosophy and speech communications at the college. "Before coming to the college, I wasn't sure what career choice to make. Now I have applied for a social science degree in order to work in public relations and foreign affairs," she explained.

"I would like to convey my thanks to the professors. Their courses broadened my outlook. I feel I have been given a good background for courses I'll take back home."

Margie studied at Lake-Lehman School last winter spending the fall semester commuting to Misericordia. She plans to enter a university when she returns to her home of Potgietersrust, South Africa.

Margie Goetsch

In contrasting the United States and South Africa she said, "The United States is more rushed. For example, at home we don't use the conveniences, like fast foods, as much. One of the biggest differences was the snow. I really enjoyed skiing. I love it and I'll miss it."
