Mixed media at Misericordia

It's not a specific time period, and it's not representative of a particular artistic movement, it's the annual mixed media art exhibit, at College Misericordia, running now until April 17.

True to its name, the mixed media show contains varied selections of art. One piece on display is Marshall Rumbaugh's lime-wood carving of the famous monk philosopher Thomas Merton. Dallas artist Sue Hand is showing a four by six foot realistic painting of a stairway. Misericordia Art Director Marilyn Webster commented, "You feel as if you can walk into the stairway and step up the stairs."

Among the other paintings, photography and needlecraft works by Art Gallery members is an abstract necklace and earring set by a Misericordia alumna.

The showing is open Sunday - Friday, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the Art Gallery at Misericordia. Call 675-2181, ext. 247 for more information.

Eleanor Miller announces for school board

Eleanor Miller of Millington Road, Bulford Farms in Shavertown has announced her candidacy for election to the Lake-Lehman School District Board of Directors. She is a resident of the Region III voting district in Jackson Township. She will be a candidate on both Democratic and Republican ballots in the Primary Election to be held on May 16.

Married to Murray J. Miller, Architect, Mrs. Miller is the mother of two sons. Jason is a freshman at Clarion University and a member of the college swim team. Justin is an eighth grade student at Lake-Lehman Junior High School and a junior ski instructor at Big Boulder Ski area.

According to a prepared statement, her credentials include a B.S. in Business Education at Montclair State College, and doctoral studies in Adult and Continuing Education at Temple University.

Mrs. Miller states that her participation on the Lake-Lehman School Board will be directed toward influencing the children of the school district to become all that they are capable of being. She expresses a special concern for students with special needs, including learning disabilities, citing the need for teachers and all staff members in the academic environment to be in-serviced on the topic of learning differences which she believes will be viewed by historians in centuries to come as the greatest educational breakthrough of the 20th century. "I'm concerned, literally, about saving children's lives," she notes. Miller stated, "The practices of nepotism, cronyism, and favoritism should have no place in public education and must be eradicated if our region is to progress and prosper. Nepotism destroys the spirit and the morale of our children's finest role models, those who have achieved on their own merits. We are growing to the level of sophistication where this is an idea whose time has arrived. Our children observe and emulate the example we set for them. If we expect them to reflect values of ethics, fairness, and equal opportunity, that is the example we must set at the highest levels of our public institutions." She states, "In this election, voters will have an opportunity to send a message to a new generation that our children, not politics, are the number one priority in the Lake-Lehman School District. This is a commitment it will take in order for the school district to fulfill its maximum potential. This is the legacy our children deserve."

Mrs. Miller's 25-year career in education includes teaching of business education at Westury High School (Long Island, New York), Horace Greeley High School and the Robert E. Bell Middle School (Chappaqua, New York) and Summit High School (Summit, New Jersey). She has been employed for 11 years at the Community College of Luzerne County as an administrator of non-traditional programs for adult learners and Assistant to the Academic Dean. In addition, she is a part-time instructor of marketing and management telecourses at LCCC.

Mrs. Miller's community service includes participation in Leadership Wilkes-Barre as a graduate and mentor. She was secretary and newsletter editor of the Leadership Wilkes-Barre Alumni Association, a member of the Awards Committee and the Executive Women's Council of Greater Wilkes-Barre Chamber of Commerce, and a Board Member and former President of Domestic Violence Service Center of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Committee, a member of the Northeastern PA unit of the American Trauma Society, and First Vice-President of Emergency Medical Services of Northeastern Pa. A founding member of the Wyoming Valley Women's Network, Miller served on the Planning Committee of the Wyoming Valley Women's Conference and as a presenter two consecutive years. She is an Advisory Board member of the Single Parents and Homemakers program at LCCC and a former member of the Public Advisory Committee of Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. She was a member of the Back Mountain Barnraising Committee, and she is a member of the Kiwanis Club of Wilkes-Barre and the Luzerne County Association of Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities.

Misericordia courses can help women cope

College Misericordia is offering a series of non-credit courses to address the interests and concerns of women. Men and women are invited to register by calling College Misericordia's Continuing Education Department at 675-2181.

Director of the Ethics Institute of Northeast Pennsylvania, Siena Finley, RSM, will discuss "Ethical Questions for Families of the Aging" on Wednesday, April 12, from 7 to 9 p.m. The course is meant to help care-givers find peace of mind while dealing with the demanding needs of aging parents, grandparents and other relatives.

Men and women who must meet the needs of others while trying not to neglect themselves or their families are invited to attend.

Cost is $10 per person, or $15 for two in the same family.

Another course, "S.O.S. - Help for Single or Separated Women" will be offered on Saturday, April 29, from 9 a.m. to noon. Attorney Mary Louise Faber and Karen Hazelton, CPA, will discuss legal and financial pitfalls to anticipate and avoid when experiencing divorce.

Through this class women can become aware of their rights and can prevent mistakes with life-long implications. The cost is $10.

Scholarships are available for those who cannot pay.

Tony award winner will speak at Wilkes

Tony award winning actress Phyllis Frelich is slated to be this year's speaker at the Cooperative Lecture on Tuesday, April 4 at 7:30 p.m. at Wilkes College Marts Center, So. Franklin Street, Wilkes-Barre. Ms. Frelich's topic is "Hear the Silence".

The Cooperative Lecture is sponsored each year by five local colleges, Wilkes College, College Misericordia, Penn State Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County Community College, and King's College along with the Jewish Community Center of Wyoming Valley.

Ms. Frelich is best known for her Broadway performance "Children of a Lesser God". Television audiences saw her in the NBC Hallmark Hall of Fame feature, "Love is Never Silent". Accompanied by her translator, she leads the audience into the wonderful yet often isolated world of the deaf.

The Cooperative Lecture is free and open to the public. Special seating arrangements have been made to accommodate the deaf community.

LCCC offers free vision screenings.

The Luzerne County Community College Alumni Office recently sponsored free vision screenings for LCCC students and staff at the main campus in Nanticoke.

The free screenings were conducted by Dr. Jay B. Tanner, a '78 graduate of the LCCC Pre-Optometry program who is employed by the Pugliese Eye Clinic; and included testing for glaucoma. Shown participating in the screenings are, from left, first row, Dr. Jay B. Tanner, Dallas; and Suzanne Dorosky, Dallas, LCCC student. Second row, Sandy Long, Wilkes-Barre, LCCC alumni coordinator; Dr. Joseph Serniak, Pugliese Eye Clinic intern; and Esther Liuzzi, Plains, LCCC director of college health services.
