Planning meeting draws 40 participants

By CHARLOT M. DENMON
Staff Writer

Anne Vernon, board member of the Back Mountain Citizens Council, said Monday that the first night of training seminar on planning and zoning sponsored by the group was a great success.

"More than 40 persons attended the session Wednesday, April 26, with every one of the nine municipalities in the Back Mountain represented," Vernon said. "Stanford M. Lembeck, ACIP, associate professor of rural sociology, College of Agriculture, Pennsylvania State University, was excellent and the persons in the session appeared to be very enthusiastic. The professor was very informative and held some practical and meaningful discussions with those in attendance."

The six-week seminar is sponsored by the Back Mountain Citizens Council, the Penn State, Wilkes-Barre Campus, the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania, the Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs. It is intended for recently appointed and experienced planning commissioners as well as for elected officials, zoning hearing board members, zoning officers and interested citizens.

Professor Lembeck and Atty.

Charles Zaleski, specialist in planning and zoning, from Harrisburg, have had a wide range of experience in planning and zoning for many years in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The future sessions will continue to feature discussions and demonstrations of planning ideas, techniques and procedures, in addition to a review of the judicial nature of planning and zoning law, as viewed by municipal officials, citizens and developers.

Among the topics included in the workshops will be the role of planning and local government, how planners perceive the planning function, strategies for a successful planning commission.

area, according to Sgt. Richard Zeglin, Luzerne County Sheriff's Emergency Services Division.

According to Zeglin, the witnesses were interviewed separately and each gave the same account.

Lt. John Kastendieck, Luzerne County Sheriff's Department, said each witness described the jumper as male, wearing a light-colored t-shirt and dark pants.

Sunday's search was called off at 12:19 p.m. after authorities determined the area had been Rumors circulated through the huge group of spectators who gathered to watch the rescue.

23-year-old Bill Thomas, Wilkes Barre, said he believes the man who jumped is still alive.

"He's alive and well and drinking coffee while we all stand out here and freeze," Thomas said.
