600 expected for triathlon Sunday

The slap of hands cutting through water, the whine of bicycle tires, and the grimaces of weary runners as they struggle up that last hill are some of the sights and sounds spectators will experience Sunday, Sept. 3, during the eighth running of the Greater Wilkes-Barre Triathlon.

More than 600 athletes are expected to compete in the grueling event, consisting of a 1.5 kilometer swim in Harveys Lake, a 40-K bicycle race and a 10-K run.

Both the bicycle and running races end on the College Misericordia campus. The athletes will plunge into Harveys Lake at 8 a.m. Sunday, and race organizers expect the winner to run across the finish line at Misericordia by about 10 a.m.

Although this year's race, sponsored by Misericordia, Nesbitt Memorial Hospital, The Times Leader and Bud Lite, is not a national championship, it will feature nationally known triathletes, said Scott Millington, race director. And for the first time in the race's history, athletes can race in teams, he noted.

"We're offering teams this year to spur more local interest," Millington said. "We have athletes coming from all over, but we don't have many local athletes, and we're hoping to have more."

"We've signed up about 30 teams so far and are looking for others," he added.

As in the past, hundreds of fans are expected to watch the race and enjoy two days of activities at College Misericordia.

The Labor Day weekend events begin on Saturday with a Nesbitt Memorial Hospital Health Fair from noon to 5 p.m. Hospital staff will be conducting blood pressure screenings, blood sugar and cholesterol screenings, non-invasive arterial oxygen saturation tests, and pulse rates. Test results will be forwarded to visitors' family doctors, so visitors will need to have their doctors' addresses.

Nesbitt also will provide health services on race day to any athlete or spectator who needs them. The hospital will set up a mini-emergency room staffed with doctors and nurses near the finish line.

Saturday evening, the triathletes and their families will enjoy the Carbo-Load Spaghetti Dinner, a home-style pasta feast sponsored and prepared by the Kiwanis. The dinner will be held in Merrick Hall's cafeteria from 6-9 p.m.

On Sunday, Race Day, six Martz busses will ferry athletes and spectators from Lake Street, which will be closed, to Harveys Lake, beginning at 5:30 a.m. and ending at 8 a.m. Another bus will be available on campus to take spectators back to their cars at the lake.

Beginning at 11 a.m. Misericordia will feature a Food Court and live entertainment from The Great Rock Scare. Athletes and fans will be treated to Hillside Farm ice cream, sausage and pepper sandwiches, potato pancakes, funnel cakes and other delicious treats. Children will enjoy a variety of amusements in the Children's Tent, organized by Misericordia volunteers.

The awards ceremony at 1 p.m. concludes the race activities, and athletes and spectators are encouraged to browse through the Food Court or enjoy the music on the scenic campus grounds.
