and his children live in the Oakland area. Only one son is at home with his parents, the other four live in various sections in or around Oakland. Although Steve was close to them, he could not get calls through to Oakland and it was not until his family in Dallas heard that Frank and his family were safe that Steve was able to get the news.

Neither Frank nor Steve have electricity but Steve has a gas stove so he is able to heat hot water or prepare food.

Jim Miller, son of Mrs. Harriet Miller and the late Arthur Miller of Dallas, has lived in the Oakland area of California for several years. He has several trucks and a car he uses in his business.

He got through to his mother early Wednesday, as soon as he could get a call through because he knew she would be in panic.

"I'm all right," he said. "Normally I would have been at the game but I had a class Tuesday night so I was at home. When the quake struck those 15 seconds seemed like minutes. The house shook and the trucks in the drive bounced around like balls. Dishes and things in the cupboard were knocked out of place but otherwise, I'm okay," Miller said.

Lisa McCartney Murphy and her husband, Michael, live in the Presidio area. They went to the game Tuesday night and were going up in the escalator when the earthquake struck. The escalator made an 'S' turn and that was it. They left the game and went to their car to go home, usually a 15 minute trip.

"I was driving and it felt like the front tire blew out."

Kim Bonawitz Now living near Oakland, CA

It took them two and a half hours to get home and when they arrived, they had no water, no heat, no electricity. They have moved out of their building and are staying at the Stanford Court Hotel where Michael is a manager.

Lisa got through to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H.R. McCartney, about 12:30 a.m. Tuesday night. She told them the area where they lived looks all right but the building had some cracks in it and some damage so they felt better staying in the hotel.

Donna Trebilcox, member of Dallas High School faculty, has a brother, Ted McMechen, who lives in San Francisco and it was not until Friday that she learned he was safe, although she had not yet talked with him.

When the days went by and she didn't hear anything, she called his place of business and talked to his manager. The manager told her that Ted was alright but he had no was unable to contact him. There most of the damage was to things nia. inside the building.

Tina Wall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Wall of Harveys Lake, had no travelers in California but used to live in California near Livermore, Oakland, and said they have lations due to the earthquake from a lot of relatives out there. "They people who had planned to go.

were shook up and had some things broken but no serious damage," Tina said. "I have a friend Mark out there and he called and said he was driving on the highway and had to pull off when the road began to heave like a roller coaster. He said last Thursday night they were still pulling people out from under the bridge.

Kim Bonawitz Turner and her son Adam have been living in Livermore outside of Oakland for the past three years. She called her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Bonawitz as soon as she could get through to tell them they were all right.

"I was driving and it felt like the front tire blew out and I was unable to control the car. There's no damage to the house, only some dishes and spices displaced," Kim said.

Mrs. Bonawitz said that just Tuesday morning Adam had an earthquake drill in school. California residents have earthquake drills out like the schools here have fire drills, according to Mrs. Bonawitz. Maria Baccario, who resides with her aunt, Lynn Bongiorno, Harveys Lake, has an aunt Dina Baccario, who just moved to Oakland, California, recently. They were able to contact her last Thursday and she told them she escaped unharmed, but there was property damage to electricity and that was why Donna the house and furnishings.
