

'No contest' was most common theme in Tuesday's elections

By CHARLOT M. DENMON

The voter turnout in the November 7 general election was scant in most Back Mountain communities since there was little or no competition with the exception of Harveys Lake Borough and Region 3 of Lake-Lehman School District and Lake Township.

The official count held Friday showed no change in the tallies turned in Tuesday night after the polls closed.

Harveys Lake had a unique situation when the candidates running for mayor tied with 433 votes each. The recount on Friday showed the two candidates, Democrat Joseph Boyle, incumbent, and Republican Joseph Purcell still tied.

The usual process to determine the official winner is to draw straws or insert a knife in a book with the highest last digit designating the winner. If Boyle wins it will be a clean sweep by the Democrats, but if Purcell wins he will be a Republican mayor with a completely Democrat council.

Terry Jones was reelected as Harveys Lake's tax collector, and elected to serve on council were William Wilson, Edward Kelly, Richard Boice, for four years; and Joseph Miscavage, two years. Mildred Dobash, running for Region 1 school director had no opposition.

In Lehman Township Kenneth

Williams had no opposition for the Region 2 seat of the Lake-Lehman School District. Peggy Moyer was reelected tax collector with no opposition and Republican David Sutton defeated Democrat Ignatius Hozempa 407-308 for the supervisor's seat vacated by Alan Major.

In Region 3 of the Lake-Lehman School District, it was a close race between Joseph "Red" Jones and Eleanor Miller, with Jones receiving 602 votes to Miller's 597. These figures remained the same after the official vote count on Friday. Newcomer Martin McMahon captured 820 votes in the election.

In Ross Township there was no competition with Kenneth Williams receiving 214 votes as Region 2 school director; Louise Evans elected tax collector with 208 votes; Robert Gray supervisor with 204 votes, and Debra Piper elected auditor with 208 votes. All candidates were Republicans.

In the Dallas School District incumbents James Richardson and Tom Landon were re-elected for four year terms, as was Tom Stitzer and a former director but not an incumbent John Cleary. John Litz, who was appointed to fill the seat of the late Albert Pisaneschi, gained a term in his own right. David Yablonski, who ran only on the Democrat ticket and received a total of 749 votes, was the loser.

In Lake Township incumbent Democrat supervisor Fred

Wisniewski was defeated 195-142 by Republican Alan Updyke. Ruth Orloski, Republican was reelected tax collector and Mildred Dobash was unopposed for Region 1 school director received 219 votes. Kathleen Williams unopposed, was elected auditor.

In Kingston Township Don Gavigan, Republican, received 650 votes. The only other candidates running were the Dallas School directors who were listed above.

It was a walk-in in Dallas Borough where all incumbent council members were reelected. Timothy Carroll and Patricia Peiffer received 344 votes each and Don Cooper received 320 votes. Peiffer and Cooper were appointed to the council earlier this year when Bill Berti and Craig Tupper resigned. Don Shaffer was defeated in the primary but his name was placed on the ballot for the two year unexpired seat of Tupper's which will be vacant in January. He received 350 votes. Paul LaBar was reelected mayor and Thomas Reese was reelected tax collector. Both candidates were running unopposed.

In Dallas Township, incumbent tax collector Leonard Kozick was reelected running unopposed. Frank Wagner, Jr. was reelected supervisor, and Kenneth Kirk, Republican was elected auditor.

Joyce Daubert, the incumbent, was reelected tax collector in Franklin Township and Timothy Dymond was reelected supervisor.

A plaque and his name plate was presented to Dr. William Camp for the time and effort and decision-making process while he was on the board from December 1981 to November, 1989. The board also honored director Tex Wilson with a similar plaque and nameplate for the same reasons. Both Camp and Wilson served from 1981 to 1989 and chose not to run in this year's election.

'The Savage Dilemma' at Dallas High

Dallas High School will present "The Savage Dilemma" by John Patrick, November 17 and 18, in the high school auditorium.

This lively comedy is a sequel to "The Curious Savage" presented five years ago at Dallas. All the zany characters from the original play are together again in a new set of adventures.

The indomitable Mrs. Savage, played by Lisa Murphy, once again returns to seek shelter in the cloisters, a private sanatorium run by Dr. Emmett (Matt Campbell) and his assistant Chris (Andrea Shone).

The guests, played by Roseann Rostock, Myron Pitcavage, Becky Lewis and Kristin Gurdin, not only have to cope with Mrs. Savage but also the arrival of a "hippy" couple, Peter Solinsky and MaryLou Baines.

Set in 1972, the play reflects the volatile times and yet also presents a heart-warming lesson in the essential goodness to be found even in the worst and sanest of us.

The play is under the direction of faculty member Donald Hopkins, assisted by instructor Audrey Ide. The student staff includes Cindi Delinsky, Dave Crake, Dave Zachary, Lisa Davenport and Shelby Napersteck. Tickets will be available at the door at $2 per adults, $1 for children under 12 years of age.
