PS center expects completion this month

Contractors are making good use of the mild fall weather to make major progress on the new Penn State Wilkes-Barre Center for Technology. Construction is expected to be finished this month, and classes will begin in the building in January. The $3.8 million facility is a result of a community campaign conducted by the Campus Advisory Board. The campus is planning a gala public dedication on April 5, 6, 7, 1990. Hank and Mickie Bartos, of Centermoreland, benefactors to the campaign, recently visited the campus to see the construction progress. A reception area in the building will be named in their honor. They are shown left, joined by Diane Ryan and Dr. James Ryan, campus executive officer.
