Area abounds with last-minute gift ideas

Is your Christmas shopping finished for all but those one or two on your list you don't know what to buy for-the ones who have everything?

It's time then to tour some of the shops in the Back Mountain, the shops which carry unique or useful items, something to suit everyone.

An artist on your list? Stop in Sue Hand's Studio on Main Street, Dallas. He or she will appreciate mat board, brushes, easels, oil or water colors.

Jewelry is always a popular item for the lady in your life, and dozens of varieties can be found in Valentine's, Roth's or Ochman's. Silver or gold chains, gem stones, unusual necklaces, bracelets, pins and much, much more. And in some of the other shops a colorful assortment of costume jewelry can be purchased.

With winter weather upon the Back Mountain, local roads become more dangerous. Dropping temperatures create icy conditions and snow often covers roads. Some spots in the Back Mountain require special driving care this time of year.

Route 415 between Bryant's Avenue is often dangerous to travel Mobile Homes and Turkey Hill is known to ice over very rapidly during cold weather. The ice usually covers both lanes. The icy conditions on this stretch of road often remain long after the road has been salted. The road forms a valley and there exists a danger of cars sliding down either hill. Several minor accidents have already occurred on this stretch of roadway this fall.

Route 309 near Martin's Mobile is another dangerous stretch of road during winter weather. The road ices up quickly. The location of the road on a hill with a sharp curve adds to the danger of an accident during inclement weather.

309 is also hazardous to travel on road also helps to hide slick spots.

Mark Elgaway, Jeffrey Fritzen, drew the ire of directors when he Mildred Dobash and Dr. John stated that the recent SAT scores voted to give the tendent the privilege of doing the interviewing.

For the person who enjoys handcrafted items, visit The Bay Window or the Hefft House where on display are candles, baskets, handmade dolls, quilted kittens or bunnies, pillows, wreaths and music boxes. Browse through and see the folk art, Icelandic sweaters, Cider painting miniatures and handpainted clothing. At The Bay Window don't miss the beautiful Rock Maple diningroom set with open hutch, server, six chairs, table and table pads, like new.

Back to Basics is the place to go for the woodburner on your list. They have log carriers, trivets, coal buckets and unique tea kettles. Perhaps a fireplace accessory set would please someone on your shopping list.

The person who has everything should certainly appreciate a gift certificate for dinner for two at one of the popular restaurants in the Back Mountain or for the lady in your life-a gift certificate at a popular hair-styling salon.

Those special ones on the list who would appreciate a leather bound Bible, would certainly enjoy one of the variety found at Gifts From Above, the shop which has hundreds of gifts for the devout Christian.

Remember that nothing is more appreciated than a gift that shows one cares, so why not give a written promise to baby sit so mother may go out once in awhile, or give Dad an "I Owe You" so many car washes. Give mother a certificate saying you will cook dinner one night and give her time to relax. Those are the gifts that are really appreciated and cost only your consideration.

If nothing else pleases, there are always flowers so stop in your favorite florist's and send a special bouquet or plant. They'll show you care and make Christmas complete.
