

Manslaughter verdict in Hillman case

By SCOTT A. DAVIS
Post Staff

The 17-year-old Lake-Lehman youth charged with the shooting death of fellow classmate Richard Hillman in June was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in Juvenile Court Wednesday.

Visiting Susquehanna County Judge Donald O'Malley ruled that the youth was guilty of the misdemeanor charge of involuntary manslaughter. He dismissed a more serious charge of voluntary manslaughter, which would have been a felony.

The week-long trial was held under a "gag order" imposed by Judge O'Malley, which forbids anyone involved in the trial from speaking to the public or press about the case.

At the conclusion of the trial, District Attorney Corrae Stevens returned to the courtroom to ask the judge if the verdict could be released to the press, but O'Malley denied the request stating he would "never" lift the gag order.

Although the trial was conducted in private, the guilty verdict was leaked to the press by an unidentified source.

No sentencing date has been announced for the youth. He could receive no sentence or could be confined to a juvenile detention center up until his 21st birthday.

The youth, identified in published reports as Chris Smith, was found guilty of the shooting death of Hillman during the morning hours of June 11. Hillman was shot three times at the youth's home on Swamp Road in Lake Silkworth. The shooting followed an apparent argument over a girl at a graduation party. Hillman graduated 3 days before the shooting.
