MUSIC TO THE EARS - Although there's not a music major among them, this group of Penn State Wilkes-Barre students won accolades for their musical performance at the national conference of College Music Educators recently in St. Louis. Demonstrating a unique music education technique of Professor Joseph Jumpeter, the group showed how non-music majors can be taught the music fundamentals of harmony, rhythm, melody and form using Third World music and instruments. Shown front, from left, is Sam Elias, of Wilkes-Barre, and Michael Schaeffer, of Shavertown, who are both pursuing baccalaureate degrees in engineering. Standing rear, Kevin Wells, Wilkes-Barre, secondary education major; Scott Schemo, Shavertown, English major and Dr. Joseph Jumpeter.
