Gauntlett selects Hampden-Sydney

Brett Gauntlett, senior basketball standout at Dallas High School has decided to attend Hampden-Sydney College in Virginia beginning in the fall of this year, according to an announcement released recently by Hampden-Sydney basketball coach Tony Shaver.

Averaging more than 13 points per game last year, Gauntlett received more than 35 recruiting letters from colleges and universities around the country including letters of interest from school's representing Divisions I, II and III of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

After being actively recruited by several schools including Hampden-Sydney, Susquehanna University, Randolph-Macon College, Roanoke College, Bridgewater College and Springhill College.

Gauntlett, who currently holds down a 3.4 grade point average, made the decision to attend Hampden-Sydney following his second visit to the campus last month.

"After visiting all the schools and spending time with each of the basketball coaches, I decided that Hampden-Sydney would provide me with well-rounded academic and athletic programs," said the 17-year-old Gauntlett. "I was impressed with the coaches and look forward to going away to college," he said.

In making the announcement of Gauntlett's selection, Coach Shaver said, "We are very excited that Brett has decided to join us here at Hampden-Sydney. He is a proven player with two most attractive qualities:

"First, his best days are ahead of him as a basketball player since he has not yet reached his full potential, and secondly, Brett has a real enjoyment for the game of basketball - not to mention his excellent shooting ability - especially from the perimeter," he said.

Gauntlett, who also played baseball while at Dallas High School, plans on majoring in Business. Brett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Gauntlett of Lake Street in Dallas.
