ALASKAN INDIAN LEGEND - Taven asks his mother to let him play with the box with the sun in it in "Yeil, Raven Stories," part of the Children's Theater Festival.

Children's Theater Festival will present Indian legends May 16

Hearing and understanding legends of different cultures is a fascinating way to begin to understand the people from around the world. In Wilkes-Barre at the Dorothy Dickson Darte Center for the Performing Arts on May 16, the parents, grandparents, and children of our region will have just this opportunity.

The Naa Kahidi Theater Company from Juneau, Alaska will perform "Fires On The Water" for the International Children's Theatre Festival. This presentation is an anthology of three classics of Tlingit Indian legend.

Keet Shagoon, The Origin of the Killer Whale, tells the story of Naatsilane, who carves a killer whale (the ocean's most powerful predator) to see revenge against his brothers-in-law who had left him to die on a rock at sea.

The Sea Monster is the story of a young man being black-mailed by his mother-in-law, a shaman. It is a story of love, honor and treachery. The final story of the evening is Yeil, Tlingit for Raven, the wise and witty trickster. Yeil tells of several of Raven's misadventures—stories that delight and enlighten.

These stories are told by a single narrator and enacted by Tlingit descendants using masks, robes, songs and dances to effectively portray the legends.

This performance (approximately 1 hour) begins at 6 p.m. Tickets are available through the Kirby Box Office 826-1100 or the Festival office 829-KIDS.
