Wells

ent in the systems.

Of the seven wells that were tested, only one proved to have no contamination. The other six were over the limit for fecal coliforms, which are bacteria that indicate the presence of human waste.

According to the tests, five wells showed a fecal coliform count of more than 100. DER said that a count of 100 in water would be enough to say that it was not even fit for swimming.

Stanley Lehman, regional supervisor for DER, said that the big difference between this test and the last tests was rain. "The runoff shows that there is still bacteria in the ground," said Lehman. "We will keep resampling and hoping that it will clear up."

Lehman said that it may be just a matter of time before the systems get cleared up. "Mr. Boice has done an outstanding job locating the sources of contamination and handling them. It is a matter of time and we have to keep waiting," he said.

Boice said that he will be out next week checking some outhouses in Warden Place. "We will be enforcing the borough's ordinance that says outhouses are not to be used," said Boice. He said that any outhouses found to be in violation of the ordinance will have to be cleaned and filled.

Boice also said that he is continuing to make sure that all residents who are supposed to be hooked up to the sewer line are connected.

Boice said that it will be a long process to find all who are not hooked up, but he is confident that things are moving forward in trying to stop more contamination in the borough.

For now, however, residents of Warden Place have to keep waiting and hoping. "I am very discouraged," says Bill Mann, who has been instrumental in dealing with the contaminated sewers.

"After the last tests I hoped we had the situation under control," said Mann. "Now we have got to get rid of the septic tanks and other things that are behind us and causing the problem."

Mann said that these latest results should let residents know that the best time to test a well for contamination is after a rainy period when there is runoff. "You just can't rely on the results of a dry period," he said.

Mann also said that any resident who wants to have a well checked can contact him.
