Shavertown UMC still celebrating its centennial

Shavertown United Methodist Church continues to be celebrated with several activities scheduled for the summer, according to Elwood and Mary Lou Swingle, cochairperson of the Centennial Committee.

On Monday, July 30, 7:30 p.m., Shavertown Night will be observed at the Montatge Lackawanna County Multipurpose Stadium, when a large block of seats have been reserved for church members and their friends. Paster Harriet L. Santos will sing the National Anthem prior to the ball game between the Rochester Red Wings and the Scranton/Wilkes-Barre Red Barons. Some tickets

The 100th Anniversary of the are still available by calling George McCutcheon at 675-2601 or through the Church Office.

> Another event will be the Centennial Cook-out Supper and Program on Sunday, Aug. 12, 4 p.m. at the Church. Grills will be available for families to cook their own meats. Persons attending are asked to bring a covered dish to share for a meal in the Social Room. A program will feature clowns as a children's entertainment. A Sunday School "Old Fashioned Sing-Along-Hymn-Sing" will also be held. Barbara Zarambo and the Children's Committeee will be responsible for this activity.

The public is invited.

Misericordia students help out in Guyana

By CHARLOT M. DENMON

Six College Misericordia stu-dents and Sister Andre Dembowski returned home Saturday, July 7, after spending six weeks in Guyana working with the poor, convalescents, orphans and in medical centers.

"It was a tremendous experience," said Noel Powers. "The people were incredible. They opened their homes and their hearts to us; they would give us anything. It was our first experience in Guyana and we all went to different spots to work.

"We stayed together at the Diocese Youth Center run by the Anglicans but we were hosted for dinner every Tuesday and Thursday nights by the different families, rich or poor. The food was the same in any of the homes, but the conditions were different. Sometimes we had lights, in others there were blackouts and we would eat by candlelight."

The six girls who went were Christine Hess, Paula Quick, Noel Powers, Nancy Steffan, Tricia Toczydlowski and Trina Schoonover. Sister Andre Dembowski, RSM also went with the Noel worked with the poor and convalescent children; Nancy worked at a hospital and sometimes at a night shelter (soup kitchen). Tricia worked at the Mercy Hospital with polio rehabilitation as did Trina, but Trina also was with Comeneus Primary School with children in remedial reading. Paula worked at a convalescent home for children who were abandoned or recovering from illness. Chris worked at the Mercy Hospital and at a convalescent

"It was called Keituer Falls. We also went to Santa Rosa Mission in the jungle in the interior and it was beautiful. They have electric blackouts and very few homes have phones. If they do have them they don't work well but the people don't mind. They just adjust to what they have.

"The people don't have any formal time-tables; we did but if we were a little late they accepted it. In the interior the transportation was very primitive. The people did a lot of walking, bike riding or horseback riding. We stayed in the city of Georgetown and we used a car."

Sr. Andre explained that the Santa Rosa Mission was about 160 years old, the oldest in the country, and was used by the Sisters of Mercy as an orphanage and school until the late 1960's. The Santa Rosa Mission and the St. Cuthbert Missions were also in the interior and the missions are the homes of the Amerindians, the indigenous people of the interior.

work, and while in Guyana the students went to see the world's explained Sr. Andre. "They are the creeks and many live in huts, some of them up on stilts with wide open walls. There is no industry in the interior."

"The highlight of our trip was going into the homes of the people," Noel said. "They have a real sense of pride and their homes are spotless. Their food is simple and plain. There are Europeans, Oriental, East Indians, Portuguese, blacks (Afros) and the Amerindians." There is a youth group in Franklin, ages 16 to 26, which gathers weekly. They socialize and have a deep sense of interpersonal relationship. The art of conversation was the highlight of the meetings. A blackout brought the people together, according to Noel.

"It's a happy culture and the pace of living is slow. The people told us we had the North American we were leaving they gave us plaques walk," Noel said.

I am honored that the students came back and are so enthusiastic, sharing their experiences with others. In Guyana, the people are wealthy spiritually and in families and in hospitality and warmth of heart," Sister said.

> "We would like to return to Guyana again," said Christine Hess. The work we did was very rewarding. We always had time for the students and we worked hard with the handicapped. We worked with the youth group which had about 40 kids with whom we shared a three-week program. We loved their
