Course in Judaic studies offered at Penn State

A course in Judaic Studies will be offered at Penn State Wilkes-Barre Campus, beginning August 27, according to William Pearman, Ph.D., acting Campus Executive Officer. Religious Studies 004, Jewish and Christian Traditions, is approved as a three credit course by Penn State's College of Liberal Arts, and co-sponsored by the Jewish Chautauqua Society. Rabbi Arnold M. Shevlin, spiritual leader of Temple B'nai B'rith in Kingston, will teach the course.

"Jewish and Christian Traditions" is described as the introduction to the perspectives, patterns of worship, morality, historical roots, and institutions of the Judaic-Christian tradition and their relationship to culture. The course will be held 15 Monday evenings from 6 to 8:30 p.m., August 27 through December 10.

In addition to being offered as a credit course, the class may be taken as a non-credit course for only $95.00. As a special service to the community, citizens over 55 may enroll for the class at no charge.

LCCC schedules summer Commencement August 29

Students who have successfully completed either a one-year certificate of specialization or a two-year associate degree program at Luzerne County Community College will be honored during a special Summer Commencement Ceremony slated for Wednesday, Aug. 29, beginning at 7 p.m.

Thomas J. Moran, president of LCCC, will provide remarks and confer degrees for the sixth annual program, which will be held at the college's Educational Conference Center on the main campus in Nanticoke. Thomas P. Leary, dean of admissions/student services at LCCC, will serve as master of ceremonies.

The welcome address will be given by Dr. William Camp, college provost; and Dr. Ann Williams, dean of arts and sciences, will present the graduates. Also included in the graduation exercises will be recognition of the college's honor graduates by Edward McLaughlin, acting dean of business, engineering and technology.

Following the ceremonies, a reception for family and friends of the graduates will be held in the LCCC Educational Conference Center dining room.

Among those being considered for graduation from the Back Mountain are:

Associate in Applied Science: Lori Ellen Bartleson, Dallas; Mihyun Cho, Hunlock Creek; Carolyn Ann Montgomery, Trucksville; Krista Leigh Ruckle, Hunlock Creek; Shannon Lynn Vavrinchik, Dallas; and Kathleen Victoria Zuba, Dallas.

Associate in Science: Ronald Johnson, Dallas; Shannon Eirine Ryan, Hunlock Creek; and Sharon Lynn Titus, Dallas.

Certificate of Specialization: Allison Jane Petrishin, Dallas.

DR. ROBERT GREENHALGH PRESENTS

TO YOUR HEALTH

ALLERGIC REACTIONS TO ANTIBIOTICS

How many people are really allergic to penicillin? How do you know if you are?

Allergic reactions to penicillin and its chemically-related derivatives are fairly rare in the general population. However, for those cases in which it does occur the onset of the reaction--called anaphylaxis--is a serious medical emergency. Bee stings can result in the onset of similar rapid allergic reactions in some people. Symptoms of the anaphylactic reaction includes hives, swelling of the throat and difficulty in breathing, vascular collapse, and, in rare cases, death.

There are also less serious reactions to penicillin that are probably allergic in origin but are not anaphylactic. Such reactions may be caused by different mechanisms from those which cause anaphylaxis. For example, ampicillin, a derivative of penicillin, can cause a fairly severe rash in many people. Scientists have not as yet determined whether this rash is actually a manifestation of an allergic reaction; many people who exhibit the rash can still take penicillin in another form.

Antibiotics other than penicillin and its derivatives can also cause allergic reactions, some of which are made worse during the summer. For example, tetracyclines can make people photosensitive. The skin is sensitized by the drug, and a photoallergic reaction results when the skin is exposed to sunlight. Tetracyclines can also cause a variety of skin rashes, as can sulfa drugs, one of the first classes of antibiotics.

Allergic reactions to antibiotics are often confused with the drugs' more common side effects, such as an upset stomach. Side effects, although uncomfortable, are not as serious as true allergic reactions, and usually do not prevent a person from taking the antibiotic.

An estimated one percent of the general population is actually or potentially allergic to an antibiotic. But for those antibiotic-sensitive individuals who are hospitalized for a life-threatening illness and need antibiotics, a desensitizing process and close supervision makes antibiotic therapy possible.

Can you become allergic to an antibiotic later in life even though you had no problems with it before? The answer is yes. It is also possible that you may be able to tolerate a drug now that once caused an allergic reaction, but most doctors and patients would not want to take that risk.

This health awareness is brought to you as a service to the Back Mountain community by Robert Greenhalgh, M.D. Dr. Greenhalgh is a Back Mountain physician who offers general pediatric, gynecology, and geriatric medical care, on a personal basis. Board-Certified in Family Practice, he is on staff at Mercy, Nesbitt, and Wilkes Barre General Hospital.
