Lisa Owens' artwork now on display

An art exhibit titled "Landscapes in Oil" will be on display at the Dallas Branch of the United Penn Bank during the month of September. The paintings are the works of Lisa Owens of Hunlock Creek. They consist of subjects painted in remembrance of times gone by. Executed with a rustic feeling, they are full of detail and texture, both tactile and visual.

Owens a grandmother of eight, is a self-taught artist with the exception of a few short classes with Kay Probst of Cambra and Sue Hand through L.C.C.C. along with husband, Frank, Owens has participated in arts and crafts shows in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. She is a member of Cider Painters of America and the Wyoming Valley Art League.

The exhibit includes landscapes of various seasons which have been classically framed as well as collector's pieces which have been designed for and painted on old saws, which have been prepared as a painting surface.

The public is invited to view the art works in the lobby of the United Penn Bank, Main Street, Dallas, during regular banking hours.
