Its time to begin mailing holiday gifts and packages

"If you mail your holiday gifts early enough, you can save money by sending them parcel post, because parcel post rates are the least expensive," says Division Manager George T. Harkins. "Sent by parcel post, your gifts will usually be delivered within a week. The clerk who weighs your package will collect the proper postage based on its weight and the distance it must travel."

But if you wait too long to send your gifts by parcel post, it's nice to know that Priority Mail, at a little higher rate, provides delivery two to three days anywhere in the country for packages weighing up to 70 pounds. Priority Mail can be sent from any post office, station or branch, or through rural carriers to any address in the U.S. Packages weighing up to two pounds can be delivered between major metropolitan areas in just two days and anywhere else in the country in three days for a flat rate of $2.40. For larger items, the price of sending a package weighing up to five pounds ranges from $3.61 to a maximum of $6.37, depending on the destination. "Not a large amount for postage," says Harkins, "but more than parcel post."

When you're really down to the wire, and time is critical, Express Mail is the service for you. Letters and packages can be sent by Express Mail Overnight Service anywhere on the Express Mail network seven days a week, 52 weeks a year and on every holiday. That means weekend and Christmas Day delivery to addresses at $8.75 for up to eight ounces, with guaranteed morning delivery in major cities.

"Parcel post can save you money when time is not a priority, and speedier service is there when you need it," says Harkins. "Use parcel post when you can, and pocket the change. You might save enough for an extra little gift for yourself."
